The Sociocultural Context of Psychosocial Interventions Francisco José Eiroa-Orosa,Tim Lomas,Michael Rowe,2018-12-06 Across diverse academic fields scholars and practitioners are engaged in developing interventions to promote outcomes like health and quality of life Indeed such is the apparent efficacy of such interventions that there are many policy led initiatives to implement these at national and international scales However few scholars or practitioners have thought in any systematic and critical way about the importance of contextualizing these interventions i.e. considering how the impact of such interventions may be affected and mediated by specific sociocultural factors from gender to ethnicity and socio economics The aim of the Research Topic The Sociocultural Context of Psychosocial Interventions was to address this lacuna As such we tried to help bringing a more contextual mindset to the implementation of health and wellbeing interventions This may help to shift the way such interventions are designed and implemented both at a granular local level i.e. influencing individual practitioners and at a large scale macro level e.g. influencing policy makers Themes within this Research Topic have concerned both macro sociocultural as well as meso and micro layers and the peculiarities of implementing real world research based on these levels There has been room for physical and mental health for family relationships for educational contexts and even for the effects of crime Some works have included interesting methodological discussions on the integration of different ecological layers or the modal distribution of our interests For us it has been very important to work giving a greater diffusion to these issues since considering psychosocial interventions in the context in which they occur goes beyond an epistemological or methodological discussion Rather these considerations seriously affect the ability of practitioners to really reach the people who need their interventions listening to their needs and respecting their preferences For the editors of this book then the contextualization of interventions means considering the people who receive them as full citizens immersed in complex societies where factors such as social justice and health or well being do not float apart in space but affect each other dialectically We therefore think that the duty of both academics and practitioners is not to forget that it is as important to evaluate the direct effect of our interventions as the influence we have in the society as a whole when we carry them out We hope you enjoy reading these works and that their dissemination stimulates new lines of research committed to both good practise and social transformation Be Exquisite Kimberly Denise Bowman,2020-07-16 Our children are under attack We live in a world now where technology is a priority trumps human interaction and understanding When these issues go unchecked they can make children vulnerable to things like bullying and suicide As a young girl I grew up dealing with these things and feeling alone I tried talking to my parents but I just couldn't get them to take me seriously So I spent a great deal of my young life avoiding mirrors avoiding my friends and being out in public hiding from my whole life because I was haunted by unhealthy thoughts that I was less than what I was I struggled for a while to find my identity understand who I was and what was my purpose but often times I found myself hiding again Finding a creative outlet for me to express myself saved me from living a life suffocated by my own thoughts and criticisms That creative outlet helped me to be able to talk to my family I vowed as I grew older and worked through my issues that I would help another family do the same This is a workbook designed to bridge the gap in between children struggling with lack of self esteem and self confidence and parents yearning to understand and help With engaging activities and discussion parents and children can strengthen their bond and grow closer together This is about helping to identify underlying issues and address them through dialogue and creative expression Having low self esteem and confidence is terrible but it's even worse when you have to do it alone Stronger families lead to stronger children strong children lead to stronger communities This workbook is a step in the right direction
