

ETHICAL EGOISM

Ethical egoism is a philosophical belief stating that it is morally appropriate for an individual to act in their self-interest.

DEFINITION

Ethical egoism argues that any action should be done solely to achieve individual benefits. This is because your top moral responsibility is to yourself.

Ethical egoism contrasts with altruism and utilitarianism, which suggest that there should be some concern for others in determining right and wrong.

EXAMPLES

Choosing to invest in a company that serves your interests:

People often invest in businesses that some may consider bad for the environment, yet also deliver excellent dividends. As this choice is most beneficial to the individual, it is seen as a morally acceptable choice.
