Quantitative Risk Assessment James M. Humber,Robert F. Almeder,2013-03-29 The National Science Foundation The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health and the Center for Technology and Humanities at Georgia State University sponsored a two day national conference on Moral Issues and Public Policy Issues in the Use of the Method of Quantitative Risk Assessment QRA on September 26 and 27 1985 in Atlanta Georgia The purpose of the conference was to promote discussion among practicing risk assessors senior government health officials extensively involved in the practice of QRA and moral philosophers familiar with the method The conference was motivated by the disturbing fact that distinguished scientists ostensibly employing the same method of quantitative risk assessment to the same substances conclude to widely varying and mutually exclusive assessments of safety depending on which of the various assumptions they employ when using the method In short the conference was motivated by widespread concern over the fact that QRA often yields results that are quite controversial and frequently contested by some who in professedly using the same method manage to arrive at significantly different estimates of risk

Bolt, Björn Hellman, Lennart Dencker, 2012-12-06 M Pliftski Institute of Oceanography Gdańsk University 46 Pilsudskiego Av 81 378 Gdynia Poland 2 The Baltic Sea with 366 000 km is only 0.1% of the world's oceans but nevertheless unique in many ways The Baltic Sea is the largest area of brackish water in the world As a formation of nature it is a sea that in many ways resembles a lake This makes its flora and fauna interesting and well adapted to the brackish water environment The recent stage of biocenosis composition is influenced by several features Historically during the last glaciation when the Baltic was sometimes a huge marine bay and sometimes a large freshwater lake several ecosystems developed and were successively replaced The flora and fauna composition of those previous biocenosis was discovered from the geological layers corresponding to the Yoldic Sea the Ancylus Lake and the Littorina Sea periods Recently the marine influence has come from the North Sea water inflow which greatly affects the salinity of the deep water The freshwater influence comes from the fluvial water which gives the surface layer a lower salinity value Salinity in the Baltic regions varies greatly Gulf of Bothnia 2.4‰ the central Baltic proper 7.13‰ the Kattegat 15.300.00 in the surface water and 32.34‰ in the bottom water the Skagerrak 20.300.00 in the surface and 32.35‰ in the bottom water
