Record Jacob Robert Kantor, 1961 Vol 1 5 consist of monographs Cultural Psychology of Coping with Disasters Manfred Zaumseil, Silke Schwarz, Mechthild von Vacano, Gavin Brent Sullivan, Johana E. Prawitasari-Hadiyono, 2013-11-21 This book offers a broad theoretical foundation by relating and contrasting relevant international literature with the outcomes of a particular research project It provides a critical reevaluation of the complex phenomena of coping with disasters on a general level by applying this integrative theory of disaster coping to a specific context A cultural psychological model is developed in order to suggest ways of understanding and assessing local and cultural specificity This interaction of the general and locally specific is central to our understanding of cultural psychology of coping with disaster The book provides a basic overview by presenting various approaches to coping with natural disasters and relating them to each other in a coherent manner So far most research approaches either focus on technical social psychological or cultural aspects of coping neglecting their interconnectedness Coping is seldom seen as an extensive long term process in which disaster relief complexly interacts and is integrated with the local actors and conditions Until now a perspective is missing in which the mentioned modes of coping are integrated with cultural interpretations and practices and long standing forms of communal self help which possibly develop in places that are frequently threatened by natural disasters Official Documents, Comprising the Department and Other Reports Made to the Governor, Senate, and House of Representatives of Pennsylvania Pennsylvania, 1897

Critical Debates on Quantitative Psychology and Measurement: Revived and Novel Perspectives on Fundamental Problems Jana Uher, Jan Ketil Arnulf, Barbara Hanfstingl, 2025-11-14 Psychology's continued crises in replicability validity generalisability and thus confidence in its findings are currently attributed primarily to questionable research practices QRPs e.g. p hacking HARKing cherry picking Popular pertinent debates therefore centre on proposals for remedying inappropriate method applications e.g. larger samples robust statistics pre registration replication Replicable non random effects of psychological interventions and differentiations between individuals are essential for applied purposes But current approaches to replicability validity and psychometric modelling are merely pragmatic providing evidence of just utility to discriminate well and consistently between cases and in ways considered important e.g. social relevance relations to future outcomes Yet without understanding the study phenomena in themselves e.g. individuals experience beliefs thought processes and without elaborating how relevant features of them can be made amenable to quantitative investigation and if at all the quantity objection the actual causes of replicable quantitative findings cannot be explored These causes however may be completely unrelated to the actual study phenomena e.g. methodomorphism This concerns in particular the attributes and latent constructs studied in psychology given that these are theoretical and statistical concepts that are attributed and construed as means of investigation and that only refer to but do not constitute the actual study phenomena in themselves We believe the currently debated deficiencies of quantitative practices in psychology are just surface symptoms whereas fundamental problems e.g. the inappropriateness of statistical assumptions for psychical phenomena and the actual root causes underlying psychology's crises and disputes around its scientific status are still hardly addressed. With this Research Topic we want to give new impetus to critical debates on the epistemological and methodological foundations of quantitative methods and measurement in psychology including problems long known but still hardly considered. Examples are: The behavioural and psychological phenomena's non-ergodicity rendering sample level statistics uninformative about individual level phenomena; Psychometricians' alignment of results to statistical theories rather than to features of the study phenomena; biasing inferences on the latter; Ideas that laypeople's intuitive judgements could reveal quantitative structures in complex, largely unobservable phenomena; The still unsupported claim that psychological phenomena could have quantitative properties at all and could thus be measured; The fact that psychometric structures shown for verbal item judgements can also be produced by semantic and Artificial Intelligence (AI) algorithms (e.g. ChatGPT) without collecting any empirical data. Still, most quantitative psychologists seem fairly unconcerned about the strong reliance on everyday language (e.g. in ratings scales) and the imprecise concepts of psychological measurement, perhaps because their consequences do not become as straightforwardly apparent as in other disciplines such as in physics, chemistry and medicine, where imprecise measurement can entail the collapse of buildings, chemical explosions or drug overdoses. But where does the loose jargon around measurement variables and psychometrics go seriously wrong in psychology? These and further contradictions, problems and challenges underlying established quantitative practices in psychology must be addressed to tackle the discipline's continued crises and to develop new approaches that are needed to advance psychology as a science. We invite from all fields contributions that critically explore and open up new perspectives on the foundations of quantification and measurement in psychology including perspectives still hardly considered (e.g. qualitative mathematics, complex dynamic systems, fuzzy systems, modelling, machine learning). We are also interested in methods for generating quantitative data, either executed by persons (e.g. time-based observations, computer-based coding) or by automated technology (e.g. ecological momentary monitoring, life logging, reality mining). However, other than commonly done, we are explicitly not seeking proposals for improving specific techniques of data analysis (e.g. statistical or latent variable models). Instead, our focus is on making explicit and scrutinising the implicitly underlying rationales and fundamental principles, thus the theory, philosophy and methodology on which quantitative research in psychology currently is or should be built in the future. This also includes critical views on whether or not quantitative investigations are meaningful at all for a science exploring behaviour, mind and society, and thus also contributions to the psychology, sociology and philosophy of science in this field.
