Pashukanis, Selected Writings on Marxism and Law Evgenii Bronislavovich Pashukanis, 1980 An Analysis of Law in the Marxist Tradition Janet Campbell, 2003 The purpose of this work is to construct theoretically a regulatory system based on the writings of a selection of Marxist legal theorists Marx Engels Stuchka Reisner and Pashukanis ascertain whether such a system might be considered law and determine whether or not there is a legitimate claim for a socialist jurisprudence Both theoretical constructs and historical examples are used during the course of discussion The results indicate that there is a viable alternative to law which does not ignore the regulatory needs of society and is compatible with the Marxist critique of the legal order It fills the gap existing in the literature of socialist law and articulates a system of social regulation that can be considered non legal thus making it compatible with Marxist theory To this date such an attempt to define theoretically a regulatory system in communism compatible with the writings of Marx and Engels has not been made

Law and Terror in Stalin's Russia John Hostettler, 2003 The brooding figure of Stalin hovered over communist power in Russia for most of its 74 years Despite its achievements his regime practiced lawlessness and terror over a wide span of territory and people The question that arises is how was he able to exercise dictatorial rule over 170 million people in the many countries making up the Soviet Union for so long Author Hostettler questions whether a different road could have been taken after the Bolshevik Revolution had succeeded He concludes that Stalin's Russia signals a warning against taking a wrong path in seeking human liberty and equality Revolutionary law is no law at all and is no substitute for the rule of law
