Critique and Disclosure Nikolas Kompridis, 2011-08-19 A provocatively argued call for shifting the emphasis of critical theory from Habermasian critique restricted to normative clarification to disclosure a possibility enhancing approach that draws on and reinterprets ideas of Heidegger In Critique and Disclosure Nikolas Kompridis argues provocatively for a richer and more time responsive critical theory He calls for a shift in the normative and critical emphasis of critical theory from the narrow concern with rules and procedures of Jürgen Habermas's model to a change enabling disclosure of possibility and the enlargement of meaning Kompridis contrasts two visions of critical theory's role and purpose in the world one that restricts itself to the normative clarification of the procedures by which moral and political questions should be settled and an alternative rendering that conceives of itself as a possibility disclosing practice At the center of this resituation of critical theory is a normatively reformulated interpretation of Martin Heidegger's idea of disclosure or world disclosure In this regard Kompridis reconnects critical theory to its normative and conceptual sources in the German philosophical tradition and sets it within a romantic tradition of philosophical critique Drawing not only on his sustained critical engagement with the thought of Habermas and Heidegger but also on the work of other philosophers including Wittgenstein Cavell Gadamer and Benjamin Kompridis argues that critical theory must in light of modernity's time consciousness understand itself as fully situated in its time in an ever shifting and open ended horizon of possibilities to which it must respond by disclosing alternative ways of thinking and acting His innovative and original argument will serve to move the debate over the future of critical studies forward beyond simple antinomies to a consideration of as he puts it what critical theory should be if it is to have a future worthy of its past Change Management and its Implications for HR Activities Avery Jerome

Agboro, 2015-11-25 Master's Thesis from the year 2015 in the subject Leadership and Human Resources Miscellaneous grade 3.8 Amity University A I H E Mauritius course MBA International business language English abstract The Human Resource Department or Human Resource Management HRD HRM is one of the most integral parts of any management Following years of management reform change management has recently become an imperativeness in today's management organization This research paper will draw on the findings of a master's study to explore change management and its implications for HR practices Similarly the HR role developed and created an environment where change and new learnings and or systems are diffused and embraced throughout the organization More so in the context of change management the pre eminence between the HRD HRM and the Management itself is no longer an absolute rather it is two segments that uphold and form a non spatial extent of success in the organization It also shows that the HRD activities and programs reinforce the management systems and policies and building the organisational capabilities required for successful change This study therefore reveals the role of leadership and leadership behaviour during change mechanism and the human capital impacts of a change effort on the workforce and the susceptibility of resistance in organizational change These are spectrum prominent to the research problem which were carefully explored in order to arrive at a solution that will give answers to the research questions The International Journal of Indian Psychology, Volume 2, Issue 1, No. 3
