Little White Houses examines how postwar media representations associated the ordinary single family house with middle class whites to the exclusion of others creating a powerful and invidious cultural iconography that continues to resonate today Drawing from popular and trade magazines floor plans and architectural drawings television programs advertisements and beyond Dianne Harris shows how the depiction of houses and their interiors furnishings and landscapes shaped and reinforced the ways in which Americans perceived white middle class identities and helped support a housing market already defined by racial segregation and deep economic inequalities After describing the ordinary postwar house and its orderly prescribed layout Harris analyzes how cultural iconography associated these houses with middle class whites and an ideal of white domesticity She traces how homeowners were urged to buy specific kinds of furniture and other domestic objects and how the appropriate storage and display of these possessions was linked to race and class by designers tastemakers and publishers Harris also investigates lawns fences indoor outdoor spaces and other aspects of the postwar home and analyzes their contribution to the assumption that the rightful owners of ordinary houses were white Richly detailed Little White
