Gender and Song in Early Modern England Leslie C. Dunn, Katherine R. Larson, 2016-04-15 Song offers a vital case study for examining the rich interplay of music gender and representation in the early modern period This collection engages with the question of how gender informed song within particular textual social and spatial contexts in sixteenth and seventeenth century England Bringing together ongoing work in musicology literary studies and film studies it elaborates an interdisciplinary consideration of the embodied and gendered facets of song and of song's capacity to function as a powerful and flexible gendered signifier. The essays in this collection draw vivid attention to song as a situated textual and musical practice and to the gendered processes and spaces of song's circulation and reception. In so doing they interrogate the literary and cultural significance of song for early modern readers, performers and audiences.

Appropriation as Practice of Memory Dimitar Daphinoff, Franziska Metzger, 2024-11-18. This volume explores how narratives and iconographic codes in literature, art, music, material culture and social, political and economic discourses were appropriated and thereby sometimes radically transformed by religious agents and how religious narrations, discourses and iconographic practices were reimagined and used up to radical deconstruction in non-religious contexts as well as in different or transformed religious contexts. Religious appropriation is thereby conceived as practice of memory drawing on reused and creating transformed narrative and visual spaces of imagination. The dimension of memory will contribute to a more differentiated typology of practices of appropriation, their forms, functions and functionalisation. Agency and power relations will be important factors in the individual contributions of this transdisciplinary volume that links approaches from memory studies, religious history, literary studies and art history.
