Reporting Et Controle Budgetaire:

Reporting et contrôle budgétaire Benoît Pigé, Philippe Lardy, 2003 Le fait de rendre compte de ce que l'on fait le reporting semble la clef de voûte de tout système d'information. A contrario les nombreuses défaillances de très grandes organisations Enron le Crédit Lyonnais l'Association de Recherche contre le Cancer semblent résulter d'une absence de reporting. Il faut garder des actionnaires des contribuables ou des donateurs. Le contrôle budgétaire tant qu'il n'est que l'outil majeur venant alimenter le reporting son rôle semble aujourd'hui plus que jamais essentiel. Le processus d'information doit donc non seulement intégrer des éléments monétaires mais il doit aussi comprendre des éléments plus qualitatifs. Deux aspects essentiels doivent ainsi être appréhendés. Le premier de tout temps fondamental est la dimension humaine. La gestion des ressources humaines est plus que jamais un enjeu d'efficacité des organisations. Le second est lié aux dimensions de communication et de traitement de l'information. L'essor des nouvelles technologies de l'information et de la communication permet en effet tout d'abord une centralisation de l'information et une décentralisation de la prise de décision. Cet ouvrage se compose de cinq chapitres. Le premier porte sur les enjeux des systèmes budgétaires et de reporting. Le second présente la construction des budgets. Le troisième est centré sur le contrôle budgétaire. Le quatrième étudie le reporting tant travers ses objectifs qu'à travers sa mise en place. Le dernier chapitre aborde les enjeux stratégiques des systèmes d'information que ce soit travers des approches centrées sur les tableaux de bord stratégiques tels que le balanced scorecard ou par la remise en cause du principe d'annualité et l'utilisation d'un rolling forecast ou encore tout simplement par la prise en compte de l'impact des nouvelles technologies de l'information et de la communication.

Reporting et contrôle budgétaire Benoît Pigé, 2011. À la différence de la communication le reporting ne vise pas faire connaître mais rendre compte. Il doit désormais intégrer non seulement des éléments monétaires issus du contrôle budgétaire mais également des éléments plus qualitatifs touchant au domaine social ou environnemental. L'existence simultanée d'une centralisation de l'information et d'une décentralisation de la prise de décision nécessite plus que jamais le recours des processus budgétaires adossés des processus de reporting. Cet ouvrage est construit en trois chapitres. Les deux premiers présentent successivement le contrôle budgétaire puis le reporting et le troisième s'attache à mettre en perspective ces outils dans le cadre de la gouvernance des Organisations. Pour répondre aux attentes multiples et diverses des parties prenantes de l'Organisation les dirigeants doivent s'appuyer sur les budgets pour décider et sur le reporting pour rendre compte. Cette nouvelle édition enrichie intéressera les étudiants et enseignants des filières gestion comptabilité et finance. Les praticiens des professions comptables contrôle et audit y trouveront des outils concrets et actualisés.

Écart et contrôle budgétaire Claude Cossu, 1989-01-01 T00:00:00+01:00 Le contrôle des budgets par la méthode des écarts selon le principe de gestion par exception implique une vision globale de l'analyse et partant une construction synthétique autour d'une unité de mesure commune qui ne peut être que l'unité monétaire. Cette construction sert d'indicateur de performances aux différents responsables budgétaires mais dans un souci de décentralisation n'est pas exclusive d'une mesure des performances en termes purement quantitatifs l'usage des opérations rationnelles aux niveaux les plus décentralisés Loin d'être d'habitude comme le prétendent certains l'analyse des coûts doit trouver un renouveau dans le cadre de politiques de contrôle de qualité totale de zéro défaut et par l'implantation de cercles de qualité
