Tunisia's Economic Development Mustapha K. Nabli, Jeffrey B. Nugent, 2022-09-16 This book identifies the differences in growth and development and the various factors lying behind them across both Middle East and North African MENA and East Asian countries over the 1960-2020 period It considers a very wide range of factors compares initial situations institutions and government policies the dynamic responses to changing circumstances and discusses the inability of the governments of the MENA region to achieve not only political reform but also the kinds of economic reform that would allow their citizens to prosper in an increasingly globalized world The book focuses on Tunisia Since its independence in 1956 until 2010 Tunisia had considerable success relative to many other MENA countries but was somewhat less successful relative to East Asian countries Since 2010 however while transitioning away from autocracy to democracy it has been in rather serious economic decline The book highlights how both the factors identified as enabling Tunisia's initial success and those leading to its subsequent decline can provide many useful insights for improving the management of economic development across the whole MENA region and perhaps also to developing countries throughout the world

Regional Economic Outlook: Middle East and Central Asia, May 2023 International Monetary Fund. Middle East and Central Asia Dept., 2023-05-03 The economies of the Middle East and Central Asia proved resilient in 2022 despite a series of global shocks However this year and potentially next growth is expected to slow in the Middle East and North Africa as tight policies to fight inflation reduce vulnerabilities and rebuild buffers start to dent economic activity in many countries and agreed oil production cuts curb growth in oil exporters Inflation is projected to remain persistent The outlook for Caucasus and Central Asia countries depends heavily on external factors namely the impact of monetary tightening and growth in their main trading partners the pace of private transfers and inflows of migrants from Russia Uncertainty is high and risks to the baseline are tilted to the downside amid financial stability concerns particularly in advanced economies amid contagion fears Policy trade offs are even more complex and policymakers will need to calibrate the policy mix carefully to reduce core inflation without triggering financial stress and excessive tightening and continue to provide targeted fiscal support to vulnerable groups while preserving debt sustainability and financial stability Tight monetary and fiscal policies across the region amid tight global financial conditions call for accelerating structural reforms to bolster potential growth and enhance resilience Regional Economic Outlook: Middle East and Central Asia International Monetary Fund. Middle East and Central Asia Dept., 2022-10-31 In a worsening global environment economies in the Middle East and Central Asia are being buffeted by a confluence of shocks a global slowdown high and volatile food and energy prices faster and stronger than expected tightening of financial conditions and the risk of fragmentation The region's emerging market and middle income economies EM MIs and low income countries LICs are hit hard with many facing curtailed access to market financing while oil exporting countries are being buffered by still high energy prices The adverse impact of Russia's war in Ukraine on the Caucasus and Central Asia CCA has thus far been milder than expected Still the CCA's strong ties to Russia entail substantial risks to the region's outlook The most urgent policy challenge for all countries is to tackle the cost of living crisis by restoring price stability protecting vulnerable groups through targeted support and ensuring food security Policy trade offs in EM MIs and LICs have become more pronounced than ever as they also need to preserve debt sustainability and financial stability Oil exporters have the opportunity to maximize the benefits of the oil windfall by building buffers and advancing their diversification plans CCA countries should carefully assess the magnitude and durability of the initial spillovers from the war in Ukraine and adjust their policy mix accordingly Limited policy space in many countries raises the urgency of structural reforms to bolster economic growth while transforming economies to become more resilient sustainable diversified and inclusive

Area Handbook for the Republic of Tunisia Howard C. Reese,1970 Regional Economic Outlook, Middle East and Central Asia, October 2023 International Monetary Fund. Middle East and Central Asia Dept.,2023-10-12 Across the Middle East and Central Asia the combined effects of global headwinds domestic challenges and geopolitical risks weigh on economic momentum and the outlook is highly uncertain Growth is set to slow this year in the Middle East and North Africa region driven by lower oil production tight policy settings in emerging market and middle income economies the conflict in Sudan and other country specific factors In the Caucasus and Central Asia although migration trade and financial inflows following Russia s war in Ukraine continue to support economic activity growth is set to moderate slightly this year Looking ahead economic activity in the Middle East and North Africa region is expected to improve in 2024 and 2025 as some factors weighing on growth this year gradually dissipate including the temporary oil production cuts But growth is expected to remain subdued over the forecast horizon amid persistent structural hurdles In the Caucasus and Central Asia economic growth is projected to slow next year and over the medium term as the boost to activity from real and financial inflows from Russia gradually fades and deep seated structural challenges remain unsolved Inflation is broadly easing in line with globally declining price pressures although country specific factors including buoyant wage growth in some Caucasus and Central Asia countries and climate related events continue to make their mark Despite some improvement since April the balance of risks to the outlook remains on the downside In this context expediting structural reforms is crucial to boost growth and strengthen resilience while tight monetary and fiscal policies remain essential in several economies to durably bring down inflation and ensure public debt sustainability
