Research Instruments in Social Gerontology ,1982

Research Instruments in Social Gerontology David J.

Mangen,1982 The increasing number of older people in the United States has served to focus attention upon the processes of aging and the effectiveness of social programs for the elderly In order to plan effective programs accurate social measures are necessary Now more than ever before researchers require conceptually explicit instruments designed to assess individual and social behaviors attitudes and traits in the elderly population This is the first in a three volume series designed to serve the needs of researchers evaluators and clinicians in assessing the instruments used in the field of aging The measures review in Volume 1 focus on the cognitive reactions of older people to aging and on the assessments of aging made by people who are not yet old This volume also contains the series introduction which explains the methods used for evaluating the instruments and assesses the status of gerontological measurement today Each chapter is devoted to instruments in a particular subject area such as intellectual functioning personality self esteem and ethnic group identification Most chapters are composed of three parts First there is a concise narrative review of the major theoretical concerns and measurement strategies within that particular research domain The second part is a collection of abstracts each of which presents a conceptual definition and a description of a specific instrument together with data about samples reliability validity scaling properties and correlations with age Whenever possible the instruments themselves constitute the third part of the chapter

Comprehensive Handbook of

Psychopathology Henry E. Adams,Patricia B. Sutker,2013-04-17 The first edition of Comprehensive Handbook of Psychopathology was published in 1984 al most a decade ago In the interim there has been an explosion of information in psychopathology Proliferation of knowledge has included a widening base of research data and changing or new concepts and theories regarding classification measurement methods and etiology of abnormal behaviors and mental disorders It has been an active and productive period for biological and behavioral scientists and clinicians particularly in terms of changing notions of the complex interaction of environmental and biological factors in many disorders For example with the classic disorders such as anxiety and dissociative disorders our understanding while far from perfect has been greatly enhanced in recent years Whereas there was almost a vacuum of empirical knowledge ten years ago about the personality disorders concentrated efforts have been undertaken to investigate classification comorbidities and expression of the personality disorders and variants in normal personality traits In addition scientific advances in the fields of behavioral medicine health psychology and neuropsychology have greatly contributed to our knowledge of psychopathology and the interplay of psychobiological factors It is now commonly acknowledged that psychopathology is not limited to the traditional mental illness categories it also plays a significant role in many physical illnesses such as cancer and AIDS With these developments it became clear that the first edition of this handbook was outdated and that a revision was needed The Self and

Society in Aging Processes Carol D. Ryff, PhD, Victor W. Marshall, PhD, 1999-06-23 This volume focuses on the experience of growing old as it is linked to societal factors Ryff and Marshall construct this macro view of aging in society by bridging disciplines and bringing together contributors from all the social sciences The book is organized into three sections theoretical perspectives socioeconomic structures and contexts of self and society Leading psychologists anthropologists gerontologists and sociologists present theoretical and empirical advances that forge links between the individual and the social aspects of aging It is must reading for researchers in all gerontologic specialties and a valuable text for graduate courses in human development psychology of aging and other social aspects of aging Geriatric Assessment Karen Patrias, 1987

The International Journal of Aging & Human Development, 2003 A Research Guide to Psychology Deborah Dolan, 2018-06-08 This authoritative research guide uses a problem solving approach to presenting print and electronic resources Coverage includes Definition and deep background sources Specialized dictionaries encyclopedias and handbooks Current research Journal Articles and Annual Reviews Tests and Measures Bibliographies U S Government Resources Biographical Resources Directories and Organizations Style Guides Diagnostic Measures Career Path and Educational Resources Book Reviews Major Museums and Archives A Guide to Research in Gerontology Dorothea R. Zito, George V. Zito, 1988-11-03 The multidisciplinary nature of the field of aging and the sheer volume of published material make researching and keeping current with new developments in the field quite difficult This reference book offers comprehensive strategies for accessing information on the psychological social biological and medical aspects of aging The types of information sources covered include handbooks directories and encyclopedias indexes and abstracts agencies and other specialized sources computerized information retrieval systems and community resources Current Literature on Aging The intended audience for this work includes information specialists and professionals concerned with gerontology in all of its aspects psychological social and medical Persons trained in any of these disciplines will find the book readable The use of examples from gerontological experience and literature is especially helpful Reference Books Bulletin The expansion of the world's older population is reflected in a tremendous increase in the literature on aging. Keeping abreast of developments in the field is made difficult not only by the sheer volume of publications but also by the multidisciplinary character of the subject. This new reference is the first to offer comprehensive strategies for retrieving gerontological research information in all the relevant disciplines. It itemizes information resources including agencies, journals, and secondary sources and outlines techniques for using library and computerized databases. Following a brief introduction, the authors set forth step by step procedures for accessing gerontological materials and describe the range of available information resources in the social, biological, and medical sciences. Individual chapters are devoted to the use of handbooks, directories, and encyclopedias, indexes, and abstracts, journals, and databases. An essential tool for information specialists, this reference will prove useful to students, academics, and professionals in any of the disciplines concerned with psychological, social, biological, or medical aspects of aging.

Aging, a Guide to Resources John B. Balkema, 1983 Applied Research in Gerontology William J. McAuley, 1987 Sociology Robert Hagedorn, 1990 Family Variables Thomas W. Draper, Anastasios C. Marcos, 1990

Attempting to make some sense out of the key constructs in the family field, distinguished contributors provide a variety of perspectives on the identification, conceptualization, measurement, and testing of family variables. Conceptual issues, the application of familiar techniques, and new and experimental methods used in this area are addressed.

Aging Political Activists David P. Shuldiner, 1995-03-23. Aging Political Activists is at once a series of political autobiographies, a set of personal narratives of social commitment, a model for qualitative research, and a challenge to current theory and practice in the social and behavioral sciences. It presents and examines the life stories of four individuals, close friends and former members of the Communist Party USA, revealing the ways they have developed and sustained their personal values and political outlook through a lifetime of involvement in movements for social change. Shuldiner approaches the interviews as a collaborative effort with his subjects, who both describe their identities and experiences and critique the interview process, offering alternate readings of the content of their narratives or new directions for inquiry. These portraits of older activists challenge notions about the role of the personal in the development of political identity while shifting the debate among gerontologists between activity versus disengagement in old age to a discussion of the dialectical relationship of these two aspects of human behavior throughout a lifespan.

Research Methods in Human Development Paul C. Cozby, Patricia E. Worden, Daniel W. Kee, 1989. For undergraduate social science majors. A textbook on the interpretation and use of research.
