Remote Sensing Of Atmospheres And Oceans:

Remote Sensing of atmospheres and Oceans Adarsh Deepak,2012-12-02 Remote Sensing of Atmospheres and Oceans presents the technical proceedings of a workshop on the interpretation of remotely sensed data held in Williamsburg Virginia in May 1979 The main topic of the workshop is the interpretation and assessment of measurements acquired in remote sounding of different atmospheric and ocean parameters The book contains 25 papers that cover the following topics remote sounding of atmospheric temperature trace gases precipitation and aerosols sea surface temperature ocean color and winds These papers are grouped into eight parts under major topics such as inversion methods aerosol sounding remote sounding gaseous constituent retrievals and interpretation of results from space The text is a valuable source of information to students and professionals in the fields of atmospheric physics applied science meteorology and engineering Remote

Sensing of Atmosphere and Ocean from Space: Models, Instruments and Techniques Frank S. Marzano,Guido Visconti,2006-04-11 This book is a collection of the lectures held at the International Summer School ISSAOS 2000 in L Aquila Italy given by invited lecturers coming from both Europe and the USA The goal of the book is to provide a broad panorama of spaceborne remote sensing techniques at both microwave and visible infrared bands and by both active and passive sensors for the retrieval of atmospheric and oceanic parameters A significant emphasis is given to the physical modeling background instrument potential and limitations inversion methods and applications Topics on international remote sensing programs and assimilation techniques into numerical weather forecast models are also touched The main purpose of the book is to offer to young scientists Ph D or equivalent students and to all who would like to have a broad spectrum understanding of spaceborne remote sensing capabilities introductory material to each remote sensing topic written by the most qualified experts in the field Proceedings of the Interactive Workshop on Interpretation of Remotely Sensed

Data Adarsh Deepak,1980 Polar Remote Sensing Dan Lubin,Robert Massom,2006-08-31 The polar regions perhaps more than any other places on Earth give the geophysical scientist a sense of exploration This sensibility is genuine for not only is high latitude eldwork arduous with many locations seldom or never visited but there remains much fundamental knowledge yet to be discovered about how the polar regions interact with the global climate system The range of opportunities for new discovery becomes strikingly clear when we realize that the high latitudes are not one region but are really two vastly di erent worlds The high Arctic is a frozen ocean surrounded by land and is home to fragile ecosystems and unique modes of human habitation The Antarctic is a frozen continent without regular human habitation covered by ice sheets taller than many mountain ranges and surrounded by the Earth s most forbidding ocean When we consider global change as applied to the Arctic we discuss impacts to a region whose surface and lower atmospheric temperatures are near the triple point of water throughout much of the year The most consistent signatures of climate warming have occurred at northern high latitudes IPCC 2001 and the potential impacts of a few degrees increase in surface temperature include a reduction in sea ice extent a positive feedback to climate warming due to lowering of surface albedo and changes to surface runoff that might affect the Arctic Ocean's salinity and circulation

Introductory Physics of the Atmosphere and Ocean L. Hasse, F. Dobson, 1986 The two chapters of this book originally appeared in Air Sea Exchange of Gases and Particles edited by P. S. Liss and W. G. N. Slinn We wrote them as a general introduction to the physical processes in the atmosphere and ocean which govern the transport of gases and particles in and between the two media Our audience was to be graduate students in physical chemistry of air and sea and research workers wishing to get started in this or a related field It was Dr. Alan Longhurst, Director General of the Atlantic Region, Canada Department of Fisheries and Oceans who pointed out that our introduction had a far wider audience in fact anyone with a scientific background who needs a basic understanding of the physics of the atmosphere and ocean Dr D J Larner of Reidel agreed and this book is the result Since we expended considerable effort to satisfy the demands of the physical chemists and also discussed the explanations much with our colleagues at home we expect the reader will find the two parts to be complementary and useful as a unified reference text On the other hand since it was designed as background material for a text on air sea gas exchange and transport the more experienced reader will be aware that the picture presented emphasizes transport and exchange processes while it ignores others No mention is made for example of weather forecasting neither is large scale ocean modelling considered
