

Parliamentary Procedure Cheat Sheet

Each officer should be familiar with the fundamental rules of parliamentary procedure. The business of any meeting is conducted more efficiently and quickly with parliamentary procedure and gives members a sense of security in knowing what course of action may be taken.

As stated in "Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised," the rules of parliamentary law are built on a careful balance of the rights of persons and subgroups within an organization. The rules are based on regard for the rights of:

- The majority – defined as more than half
- The minority
- Individual members
- Absentees
- All these together

Order of Business

Call to order

The president must first determine if a quorum is present. A quorum is defined as the number of voting members who must be present in order for business to be legally transacted. The bylaws should stipulate the number for quorum. If your bylaws do not stipulate a number for quorum, then it is a majority (more than half) of your voting members. No business may be conducted if the meeting lacks a quorum. The president stands, waits or signals for quiet, and says, "The meeting will come to order."

Roll call

The president says, "The secretary will call the roll."

Reading and approval of minutes

The president says, "The secretary will read the minutes." Note: The secretary stands to read the minutes. The president sits down. This should only happen if the minutes are not distributed before the meeting.

Or the president says "The minutes were distributed before the meeting."

The president says, "Are there any corrections to the minutes?" (Pause) [Choose one of the following statements:]

["If there are no corrections, the minutes are approved as read/distributed."]

["If there is no objection, the secretary will make the correction(s) [insert proposed corrections]. If there are no further corrections, the minutes are approved as corrected."]
