Relatedness Harold H. Oliver, 1984 In this volume Professor Oliver sets forth explicitly the theological philosophical and hermeneutical implications of the relational ontology he presented earlier in A Relational Metaphysic These ten essays diachronically map the course of his thinking from the first essay that summarizes his theory of the complementarity of religious and scientific discourse through a reassessment of the intentionality of myth and the nature of the relational self to issues of rationalism and historicism in hermeneutics Oliver's underlying thesis is that previous metaphysical and hermeneutical schemes have been conceptually dependent upon the subject object paradigm which accounts for their inadequacy Professor Oliver proposes a major reinterpretation of religious discourse of the ethical dimension of religion of the nature of selfhood and of human destiny He advocates a method of biblical interpretation that moves beyond rationalism and historicism His seminal work should elicit keen interest among and provoke serious responses from concerned readers of religion and theology including theologians and philosophers and students in seminaries and graduate schools dust jacket
