Relational Self Theoretical Convergences In Psychoanalysis And Social Psychology:

The Relational Self Rebecca C. Curtis, 1991-03-22 In recent years the traditional psychoanalytic view of the self as an autonomous entity has been shifting to a more relational perspective. This evolution from a solely intrapsychic stance brings psychoanalysis closer to the viewpoint of social psychology, formerly a highly divergent discipline. Bridging these different literatures, THE RELATIONAL SELF describes the extent and meaning of these convergences. The book is divided into four sections. The first two examine current perspectives from psychoanalytic self psychology and social psychology, and the latter two present an integration of psychoanalytic and social personality approaches. Part One reviews the psychoanalytic theories of character structure that focus upon identity, maintenance, self-esteem, regulation, and resistance to change. Also presented is an interactional view of the self that explores the intersubjective context of intrapsychic experience. Part Two shifts from the largely unconscious intrapsychic self to the self as affected by situational variables. Considered here are the relationship between self image and attitudes, the social categories deemed by people as important to their identity, and the effects of physical relocation upon self concept change. Part Three presents a theory of the self with separate rational and experiential processing systems and also explores cultural influences on the self from a psychoanalytic vantage point. Part Four considers psychotherapy, self verification, and self concept change, including self defeating behavior and self consistency, striving, the avoidance of self awareness, self evaluation, maintenance, and self with other representations. Bringing together the work of leading theorists in social, psychoanalytic, and personality psychology on the interaction of self organization with the social and physical environment, THE RELATIONAL SELF fosters a better understanding of both situational and dispositional variables and a deeper appreciation of the changing theoretical sense of a relational self as the ultimate stage of development.

T. Evans, Keith Frankish, 2009 This book explores the idea that we have two minds one that is automatic unconscious and fast the other controlled conscious and slow In recent years there has been great interest in so called dual process theories of reasoning and rationality According to dual process theories there are two distinct systems underlying human reasoning an evolutionarily old system that is associative automatic unconscious parallel and fast and a more recent distinctively human system that is rule based controlled conscious serial and slow Within the former processes are held to be innate and to use heuristics which evolved to solve specific adaptive problems In the latter processes are taken to be learned flexible and responsive to rational norms Despite the attention these theories are attracting there is still poor communication between dual process theorists themselves and the substantial bodies of work on dual processes in cognitive psychology and social psychology remain isolated from each other This book brings together leading researchers on dual processes to summarize the state of the art highlight key issues present different perspectives explore implications and provide a stimulus to further work It includes new ideas about the human mind both by contemporary philosophers interested in broad theoretical questions about mental architecture and by psychologists specialising in traditionally distinct and isolated fields For all those in the cognitive sciences this is a book that will advance dual process theorizing promote interdisciplinary communication and encourage further applications of dual process approaches
