basically alone experiencing occasional fleeting moments with other people Research based on this individualist assumption has dominated the behavioral and clinical sciences but there are other voices and they are growing In this book many of the scholars who are moving relationships and attachments back to the center of human development outline their central concepts findings and perspectives People are fundamentally social and relationships are part of the fabric of being human forming an essential foundation that molds each person's mind and action A mind does not reside in one person but in relationships and communities composed of many people's interconnected minds which mutually support and define each other From the start and throughout life each person develops strengths and vulnerabilities in important relationships in communities and cultures Those relationships are so central to each person's activity and experience that without them no scientific explanation can even begin to analyze mind and action There is no mind without other people There is no psychological vulnerability that does not involve others The contributors to this book aim to establish a firm foundation for the role of relationships in human activity and health and to promote strong research by bringing together in one place most of the best research and theory on development and relationships Their goal is to stimulate a more radical inclusion of relationships in mind an ecological focus on the ways that relationships constitute action feeling and thought

Adult Development Jan D. Sinnott, 2014-07-08 Relationships especially close relationships are among the most important aspects of life for most of us Close relationships reach to the very heart of our happiness but exactly what processes or skills over the course of a lifetime help us learn to relate to one another more and more deeply and to grow past the differences and problems that might divide us Adult Development applies the concept of complex postformal thought in order to explore how certain cognitive processes support individuals close relationships such that those relationships grow stronger and richer over time Complex postformal thought allows a person to deal with everyday logical contradictions by letting that person understand that reality and meaning are co created In this way postformal thought enables adults to bridge two contradictory but logical positions and reach an adaptive synthesis of them through a higher order logic Taking this inquiry a step further Sinnott examines the role played by postformal thought in intimate relationships those between spouses partners parents and children siblings and close friends Sinnott argues that postformal thought seems to develop later in life and is somewhat akin to the concept of wisdom Based on 30 years of research this book diverges from typical contributions to this field by discussing positive adult development in the context of close relationships Rather than focusing on the emergence of deficits of adulthood and particularly aging Sinnott instead explores the cognitive processes that are important in creating and sustaining close ongoing relationships influence of family relationships and genetic factors on competence and psychopathology in adolescent development The sample for this landmark study included 720 pairs of same sex adolescent siblings including twins half siblings and genetically unrelated siblings and their parents Using a clear expressive style David Reiss and his coinvestigators identify specific mechanisms that link genetic factors and the social environment in psychological development They propose a striking hypothesis family relationships are crucial to the expression of genetic influences on a broad array of complex behaviors in adolescents Moreover this role of family relationships may be very specific some genetic factors are linked to mother child relationships others to father child relations some to relationship warmth while others are linked to relationship conflict or control The specificity of these links suggests that family relationships may constitute a code for translating genetic influences into the ontogeny of behaviors a code every bit as important for behavior as DNA RNA
