Phantom Dwelling:

Experimental Evaluation of the Radiation Protection Afforded by Residential Structures Against Distributed Sources John A. Auxier, 1959 A study was made to obtain information that could be used to evaluate the protection afforded by residences against radiation due to fallout The sources used were Co60 and Cs137 and the radiation dosimeters used were pocket type ionization chambers Measurements were made for distributed sources 400 Co60 and 20 Cs037 and for single sources located inside the structures one each 2 curie Co60 and Cs137 Attenuation measurements were made for five houses of typical domestic design and construction Several modifications were made to the houses and the attenuation measurements were repeated The houses located at the Nevada Test Site included single and two story houses with and without basements and with light and heavy walls For comparison with the house data the dose rate distribution above an extended plane source was measured in a phantom house i e air measurements with the instrument fixed on a framework of thin walled aluminum tubing Although the complete analysis of the data is not yet available some typical analyses are presented and the effectiveness of some of the modifications is illustrated Judith Wright and Emily Carr Anne Collett, Dorothy Jones, 2021-01-28 Knitting together two fascinating but entirely distinct lives this ingeniously structured braided biography tells the story of the lives and work of two women each a cultural icon in her own country yet lesser known in the other s Australian poet Judith Wright and Canadian painter Emily Carr broke new ground for female artists in the British colonies and influenced the political and social debates about environment and indigenous rights that have shaped Australia and Canada in the 21st century In telling their story ies this book charts the battle for recognition of their modernist art and vision pointing out significant moments of similarity in their lives and work Although separated by thousands of miles their experience of colonial modernity was startlingly analogous as white settler women bent on forging artistic careers in a male dominated world and sphere rigged against them Through all this though their cultural importance endures two remarkable women whose poetry and painting still speak to us today of their passionate belief in the transformative power of art Relocating Television Jostein Gripsrud, 2012-07-26 For over half a century television has been the most central medium in Western democracies the political social and cultural centrepiece of the public sphere Television has therefore rarely been studied in isolation from its socio cultural and political context there is always something important at stake when the forms and functions of television are on the agenda The digitisation of television concerns the production contents distribution and reception of the medium but also its position in the overall largely digitised media system and public sphere where the internet plays a decisive role The articles in this comprehensive collection are written by some of the world s most prominent scholars in the field of media communication and cultural studies including critical film and television studies Relocating Television offers readers an insight into studying television alongside the internet participatory media and other technocultural phenomena such as DVDs user generated content and everyday digital media production It also focuses on more specific programmes and phenomena

including The Wire MSN amateur footage in TV news Bollywoodization of TV news YouTube fan sites tied to e g Grey s Anatomy and X Factor Relocating Television will be highly beneficial to both students and academics across a wide range of undergraduate and postgraduate courses including media communication and cultural studies and television and film studies
