Making Ireland British 1580-1650 Nicholas Canny, 2001-05-03 This is the first comprehensive study of all the plantations that were attempted in Ireland during the years 1580-1650 It examines the arguments advanced by successive political figures for a plantation policy and the responses which this policy elicited from different segments of the population in Ireland The book opens with an analysis of the complete works of Edmund Spenser who was the most articulate ideologue for plantation The author argues that all subsequent advocates of plantation ranging from King James VI and I to Strafford to Oliver Cromwell were guided by Spenser's opinions and that discrepancies between plantation in theory and practice were measured against this yardstick The book culminates with a close analysis of the 1641 insurrection throughout Ireland which it is argued steered Cromwell to engage in one last effort to make Ireland British

The Laggan Army in Ireland, 1640-1685 Kevin McKenny, 2005 This book follows the landed interests political ideologies and military campaigns of north west Ulster settlers in Ireland between 1640 and c 1685 showing how local politics affected the Irish political situation nationally After demonstrating by ethnic origins the landholding patterns of these people on the eve of the great Irish Rebellion of 1641 it is shown that they responded to the threat generated by this insurrection by forming themselves into a formidable military fighting corps which was termed the Laggan Army When the King and Parliament went to war on the British mainland in 1642 the ideological divisions surrounding that conflict were slowly transferred to Ireland This occurred when both the King and parliament sought aid from the settlers in Ireland Initially the support given by Ulster s settlers to the sides in England was complicated by the Catholic threat to their estates in Ireland When Parliament placed the vanquished King on trial for his life however the settlers in Ireland quickly polarised into those who supported the King and those who supported the ideologies of the Parliament The result of this polarisation was that British civil war battles were fought on Irish soil where settler fought settler over the ideological differences generated by the execution of Monarchy in 1649 This study looks at the fortunes of those settlers who supported the King Key appendices list original north west grantees of confiscated land landowners in 1641 soldiers and their land allocation in 1649 Ulster and Scotland, 1600-2000 William Kelly, William P.
