

The technical drawing consists of three distinct views of a mechanical component:

- Left View (Side Elevation): Shows a profile with a curved upper surface and a stepped lower section. It includes dimension lines indicating measurements along the horizontal axis.
- Center View (Top View): A rectangular plan view showing internal features like slots or holes, represented by dashed lines. It also contains dimension lines.
- Right View (Cross-Section): A detailed cross-sectional view of the part, revealing its internal geometry and material distribution. Labels with leader lines point to specific features, though they are difficult to read due to the image quality.
