Changing the Game Luke J. Hollingsworth,2017 This study presents the results of research conducted on Pro Bowl NFL players and their social media posting habits specifically what type of content the players were posting on the social media platform Twitter The purpose of this research was to identify what nine of the top ten most voted upon Pro Bowl NFL players were posting about on Twitter in order to establish a guideline for other NFL players to use when posting on Twitter to gain more Pro Bowl votes from fans With the high bankruptcy rate and low average length of an NFL career it would be beneficial to NFL players to have a guideline to help them capitalize on potential bonuses like the bonuses that come with being elected to the NFL Pro Bowl This is a qualitative research paper that uses content analysis to compare the results of data from two separate time frames In designing this study it was assumed that the most voted upon Pro Bowl NFL players would be posting content that would have positive effects on their relationships with fans because of their success in being in the top ten for Pro Bowl voted for NFL players essentially using some form of Impression Management IM technique Data from the content the nine subjects posted was collected during two separate time frames in order to be compared to each other While the findings in this research yielded useful data as a starting point it is not enough to make general conclusions on whether the content posted by the top voted on NFL Pro Bowl players could be used as guidelines for other NFL players to receive more fan votes
