Planned To Death The Annihilation Of A Place Called Howdendyke:

Planned to Death John Douglas Porteous, 1989 Domicide John Douglas Porteous, Sandra Eileen Smith, 2001 Media reports describing the destruction of people's homes for reasons ranging from ethnic persecution to the perceived need for a new airport or highway are all too familiar. The planned destruction of homes affects millions of people globally; places destroyed range in scale from single dwellings to entire homelands. Domicide tells how and why the powerful destroy homes that happen to be in the way of corporate, political, bureaucratic and strategic projects. Too frequently this destruction is justified as being in the public interest.

Hard As the Rock Itself David Robertson, 2011-05-18 The first intensive analysis of sense of place in American mining towns. Hard As the Rock Itself: Place and Identity in the American Mining Town provides rare insight into the struggles and rewards of life in these communities. David Robertson contends that these communities, often characterized in scholarly and literary works as derelict, as sources of debasing moral influence and as scenes of environmental decay, have a strong and enduring sense of place and have even embraced some of the signs of so-called dereliction. Robertson documents the history of Toluca, Illinois; Cokedale, Colorado; and Picher, Oklahoma, from the mineral discovery phase through mine closure, telling for the first time how these century-old mining towns have survived and how sense of place has played a vital role. Acknowledging the hardships that mining's social, environmental and economic legacies have created for current residents, Robertson argues that the industry's influences also have contributed to the creation of strong, cohesive communities in which residents have always identified with the severe landscape and challenging but rewarding way of life. Robertson contends that the tough, unpretentious appearance of mining landscapes mirrors qualities that residents value in themselves, confirming that a strong sense of place in mining regions, as elsewhere, is not necessarily wedded to an attractive aesthetic or even to a thriving economy.

Companion Encyclopedia of Geography Prof Ian Douglas, Ian Douglas, Richard John Huggett, Mike Robinson, 2003-09-01 The Companion Encyclopedia of Geography provides an authoritative and provocative source of reference for all those concerned with the earth and its people. Examining both physical and human geography and charting human activities within their habitat up to the present day, this Companion also asks what lies in the future: A differentiated world? A world transformed by the growth of a global economy? The global scale of habitat modification? A world of questions. Changing worlds, changing geographies. Geographical futures. The forty-five self-contained chapters are bound into a unifying whole by the editors' general and part introductions; each chapter provides details of the most useful sources of further reading and research, and the volume is concluded with a comprehensive index. This is an invaluable resource not only for students, teachers and researchers in the academic domain but also for professionals in interested commercial and public sector organisations.
