

PLANNING DESIGN CRITERIA: WATER SUPPLY

All buildings shall conform to the general requirements

Rate of Flow

One of the important items that needs to be determined before the sizes of pipes and fittings for any part of the water piping system may be decided upon, is the rate of flow in the service pipe which, in turn depends upon the number of hours for which the supply is available at sufficiently high pressure. If the number of hours for which the supply is available is less, there will be large number of fittings in use simultaneously and the rate of flow will be correspondingly large.

The data required for determining the size of the communication and service pipes are:

- the maximum rate of discharge required;
 - the length of the pipe; and
 - The head loss by friction in pipes, fittings and meters.
- Discharge Computation The design of the consumers, pipes or the supply pipe to the fixtures is based on;

the number and kind of fixtures installed;

the fixture unit flow rate; and

The probable simultaneous use of these fixtures.
