Maternal Effects As Adaptations Timothy A. Mousseau, Charles W. Fox, 1998-06-18 Mothers have the ability to profoundly affect the quality of their offspring from the size and quality of their eggs to where when and how eggs and young are placed and from providing for and protecting developing young to choosing a mate In many instances these maternal effects may be the single most important contributor to variation in offspring fitness This book explores the wide variety of maternal effects that have evolved in plants and animals as mechanisms of adaptation to temporally and spatially heterogeneous environments Topics range from the evolutionary implications of maternal effects to the assessment and measurement of maternal effects Four detailed case studies are also included This book represents the first synthesis of the current state of knowledge concerning the evolution of maternal effects and their adaptive significance

Life History Evolution in Plants Timo Olavi Vuorisalo, P. Mutikainen, 2001-11-30 The lack of discussion of the life histories of modular organisms is the weakness of this book that I most regret Modular organisms are different S C Stearns The Evolution of Life Histories 1992 Life history theory endeavours to increase our understanding of the processes whereby the broad features of the life cycles of organisms such as the timing and magnitude of reproduction have evolved Although reproductive traits have dominated as study objects due to their immediate importance for evolutionary success much work has also been conducted on patterns of development growth and senescence as well as on the shifts in resource allocation related to these processes The basic axiom of life history theory is that patterns of life histories such as reproductive traits are subject to evolutionary explanation This idea can be traced back at least as far as Darwin's Origin of Species 1859 In his discussion of plant domestication Darwin wrote I cannot doubt that the continued selection of slight variations either in the leaves the flowers or the fruit will produce races differing from each other chiefly in these characters Darwin was impressed by the success of plant breeders in moulding the growth and reproductive parameters of cultivated plants and believed that natural selection could have a similar impact in natural populations

Microbial Ecology of Lake Plußsee Jürgen Overbeck, Ryszard J. Chrost, 2012-12-06 Lake Plu see is a small eutrophic kettle lake in northern Germany Because it is sheltered and has no inflow from rivers the Plu see exhibits stable stratification and is especially suitable for limnological studies This book presents the results of extensive research conducted on the ecophysiology of microorganisms principally bacteria at the Plu see over the past several decades It begins with three chapters on the general limnological state of the lake physical factors inorganic nutrients plankton composition and succession fish fauna etc These chapters are followed by discussions of dissolved organic matter and photosynthetic production of organic matter by phytoplankton The remainder of the book addresses the dynamics of structure function and metabolism of the microorganisms in the Plu see

Tropical Forests: Management and Ecology Ariel E. Lugo, Carol

Lowe, 1995-06-29 Forestry professors used to remind students that whereas physicians bury their mistakes foresters die before theirs are noticed But good institutions live longer than the scientists who contribute to building them and the half century of work of the USDA Forest Service's Institute of Tropical Forestry ITF is in plain view an unprecedented corpus of accomplishments that would instill pride in any organization There is scarcely anyone interested in current issues of tropical forestry who would not benefit from a refresher course in ITF's findings its early collaboration with farmers to establish plantations its successes in what we now call social forestry its continuous improvement of nursery practices its screening trials of native species its development of wood processing technologies appropriate for developing countries its thorough analysis of tropical forest function and its holistic approach toward conservation of endangered species Fortunately ITF has a long history of information exchange through teaching like many others I got my own start in tropical forest ecology from just such a course in Puerto Rico And long before politicians recognized the global importance of tropical forestry the ITF staff served actively as ambassadors of the discipline visiting tropical countries everywhere to learn and when invited to do so to help solve local problems It is a general principle of biogeography that species turnover rates on islands are higher than those on continents Inevitably the same is true of scientists assigned to work on islands

Effects of Land-use Change on Atmospheric CO₂ Concentrations Virginia H. Dale, 1994 Biogeochemistry of Subalpine Ecosystem Jill Baron, 1992

Coral Reef Ecology I. Sorokin, 1993-12-21 Coral reef communities are among the most complex mature and productive ecosystems on earth Their activity resulted in the creation of vast lime constructions Being extremely productive and having the function of a powerful biofilter coral reefs play an important role in global biogeochemical processes and in the reproduction of food resources in tropical marine regions All aspects of coral reef science are covered systematically and on the basis of a holistic ecosystem approach The geological history of coral reefs their geomorphology as well as biology including community structure of reef biota their functional characteristics physiological aspects biogeochemical metabolism energy balance environmental problems and management of resources are treated in detail Pests and Pathogens Peter G. Ayres, 1992 Pests and pathogens cause enormous damage to crops and natural vegetation but their effects are usually studied separately This new review volume covers both subjects with the aim of establishing where their effects overlap or where there are essential differences Plant responses to pests are triggered by injury to photosynthetic tissue The usual physiological response is a modification of growth to minimize damage In populations of wild plants a loss of competitive and reproductive fitness normally occurs whereas crops suffer from a lower harvestable yield By reviewing areas of commonality it is intended that crop loss assessment models can be refined and improved particularly since pests and pathogens often affect crops simultaneously Recent advances in the understanding of basic wound responses and both intra and inter plant signalling reveal the extent to which the biochemistry of different defence mechanisms may have diverged from common origins in the course of evolution Understanding the reasons for this divergence will in the long term greatly benefit efforts in plant breeding It is intended for plant researchers postgraduates and final year undergraduate students in plant biology particularly plant pathology agricultural botany and entomology
