SECOND EDITION

JULIAN EVANS

Plantation Forestry In The Tropics

Stephen Robert Harrison, J. L. Herbohn

Plantation Forestry In The Tropics:

Plantation Forestry in the Tropics Julian Evans, 1992 This new edition has been completely revised to provide up to date accounts of silvicultural practices rural development issues and the wider role that tree planting plays The chapters on agroforestry and protection forestry have been virtually rewritten while throughout the book the important place of social forestry is recognized

Plantation Forestry in the Tropics Julian Evans, John W. Turnbull, 2004-04-15 Development of planted forests in tropical and subtropical countries is accelerating to satisfy the ever growing global demand for wood products It is expected that within 20 years half of all wood fibre in the world will be sourced from plantations of which more than half are in the tropics and subtropics Active community involvement in tree planting as part of rural development is now widespread and welcome

Plantation Forestry in the Tropics provides an overview that sets plantation silviculture in the wider context of development processes and their social environmental and ecological impacts The structure and approach of previous editions have been retained but every chapter has been comprehensively revised and updated Two new chapters one on clonal forestry the other on ecological restoration have been added

Plantation Forestry in the Tropics Evans Julian, 1982 The justification of plantation forestry in the Tropics. , Plantations in the Tropics Jacqueline Sawyer, 1993 Based on thorough bibliographic research of a highly controversial topic this report jointly sponsored by IUCN UNEP and WWF shows the potential of plantations while also exposing problems which may arise if massive tree plantations proposed for the tropics are to be established Major issues covered include species selection soil and water cycle effects fires pests and diseases effects on biodiversity carbon dioxide fixation land tenure and social issues and plantation economics Some broad conclusions and guidelines to be considered when establishing large scale plantations in the tropics complete this study

Plantation Forestry in the Tropics Julian Evans, 1992 Tree planting and plantation forestry in tropical countries is expanding rapidly Social and community forestry tree planting to control soil erosion and use of agroforestry as well as the many industrial afforestation projects are all part of the response to tropical deforestation and are central to much rural development The international Tropical Forest Action Programme TFAP promotes these many roles for tree planting and this book Plantation Forestry in the Tropics covers each one seeking to set the essential silviculture of how to grow trees in tropical conditions in the wider development context This new edition has been completely revised to bring up to date 1991 silvicultural practices rural development issues and the wider role tree planting now plays Treatment of agroforestry and protection forestry has been virtually re written while throughout the book the important place of social forestry is recognized with frequent illustration and inclusion of important principles For example extension programmes community participation and issues of tree and land tenure are all included in addition to questions of species choice for fuel or fodder or poles how to match species and site coppicing and pollarding and the many other ingredients of woodlot farm forestry or agroforestry management Particular attention is paid to difficult sites such as the need for terracing on sloping ground or micro catchments in arid areas or coping with industrial waste land and saline soils The silviculture underpinning successful industrial plantation forestry remains at the heart of this book Many developments in tree improvement and forest nurseries through to considerations of forest protection and monocultures are covered The greater length of the second edition brings needed balance in the 1990s to include the wider issues outlined from industrial plantation to social forestry Thus the book provides the student with a comprehensive introduction or the practitioner or development specialist with an overview of plantation forestry and tree planting in tropical countries as part of sound land use Plantation Forestry in Tropical Countries Björn Lundgren, 1980 Plantation forestry in the study Land potential in the tropics Forest management its influence on and dependence of the physical land characteristics Land evaluation and soil management for forestry The Comparative Economics of Plantation Forestry Roger A. Sedjo, 2015-09-25 Plantation forestry is the planting managing and harvesting of trees for the production of industrial wood Originally published in 1983 the principal focus and contribution of the study lies in Roger Sedjo's examination of the economic returns in twelve forest regions throughout the world The results of the analysis strongly demonstrate the feasibility of major expansion of plantation forestry in a number of areas around the world and suggest the likelihood of major shifts in the principal supply areas The results also have potentially important implications for countering the threats of deforestation This title will be of interest for students of Environmental Studies
