Plants & People in Ancient Scotland Camilla A. Dickson, James Holms Dickson, 2000 Pflanzennutzung epochen bergreifend Arch obotanik Grossbritannien A History of Scottish Medicine Helen M. Dingwall, 2003 In this exciting new book Helen Dingwall introduces the history of Scottish medicine from earliest times to the present day Poisonous Plants Robert Bevan-Jones, 2009 Robert Bevan Jones brings together a wealth of documentary and archaeo botanical sources to discuss the cultural social and anti social role of the 50 most significant species of poisonous plants and fungi found in Britain either as natives or as introductions Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, 2007 Includes List of members Prehistoric Coastal Communities Martin Bell, 2007 Providing evidence about prehistoric life in Britain this book focuses on the little studied communities of the South West and Wales It offers useful case studies from nationally important Bronze Age sites such as Brean Down on the Somerset Levels In the Shadow of the Brochs Beverley Ballin Smith, Iain Banks, 2002 In this work 20 leading Scottish authorities and new researchers on the Iron Age provide a wide ranging account of our present knowledge of the period Food, Culture and Identity in the Neolithic and Early Bronze Age Michael Parker Pearson, 2003 Archaeology literally feeds on the residues and discarded remains of our ancestors meals Such material has spawned a vast field of research and scientific techniques looking at prehistoric diet and food so that we can now learn more about the residues found stuck to the bottom of a Bronze Age pot than what is at the bottom of our own freezers The Glasgow Naturalist, 2002 Includes the Transactions and proceedings of the Society 1909 55 called third series 1909 30 The British National Bibliography Arthur James Wells, 2003 Species History in Scotland Robert A. Lambert, 1998 Environmental historians archaeologists ecologists biologists and nature conservationists offer an interdisciplinary approach to species history in Scotland Plants & People, 2001 Archaeology Linda L. Hasten, 2005 A reader of articles from the public press including Newsweek Natural History Archaeology and The Archaeologist at Work Ulster Journal of Archaeology, 2003 Investigations in Sanday, Orkney: Excavations at Pool, Sanday : a multi-period settlement from Neolithic to late Norse times John Hunter, 2007 Sanday is one of the most fertile of the Orkney islands and these two volumes explore an unusually complete cultural landscape of prehistoric times Together they demonstrate that the risk management strategies subsistence base and related social arrangements of people living on islands on the North Atlantic fringe were different to those of populations in other areas of mainland Britain Coastal erosion threatening the site at Pool on the west coast of the island led to its excavation during 1983 8 revealing a long structural sequence from the mid fourth millennium BC to the Norse period of the 9th to 11th centuries AD The long settlement sequence at Pool means that it is possible to see long term change in the subsistence base as new crops and new animals are added to it and yet there is a striking continuity in the basic way of life over almost five millennia that demonstrates a successful adaptation to island life for if the harvest failed there was always the sea and the cliffs to provide food Substantial Neolithic stone built structures

represented a permanent settlement housing perhaps more than one family group and unusually both Grooved Ware and Unstan Ware were included in the material culture of the inhabitants The latest Neolithic building was absorbed into a subsequent Iron Age village as a core structural unit and survived through into the Viking period in modified form Outstanding finds include a securely dated Pictish symbol stone and an ogham inscription By the time of the Norse arrival probably in the eighth or ninth centuries at the very latest the settlement had contracted substantially but had not been abandoned completely A native population of unknown size or status survived in association with the Norse incomers until sometime in the 10th or 11th century when the distinction became less obvious A notable innovation of Norse times was the cultivation of flax

Environmental Archaeology Keith Wilkinson, Chris Stevens, 2003 Environmental Archaeology provides a pragmatic introduction to the subject taking the reader step by step through approaches methods and theoretical frameworks used by archaeologists with a focus throughout on interpretation

Regional Stratigraphy of North America W.J. Frazier, D.R. Schwimmer, 2013-11-11 An early reviewer of this book stated that he had difficulty assessing its marketability because it falls between the cracks of geological literature We have designed this book to meet a need of modern geology namely a single source providing both detailed and synoptic stratigraphy of the various regions of North America through geological time Shortly after beginning work on such a book we realized why it had not yet been written it required six years of effort assimilation of an incredible amount of information and two years additional work to cut the volume down to publishable size Further by the time the final chapter was written the first few were already out of date Nevertheless the book lies in front of you It is intended to serve several purposes As a textbook it will serve the following courses Regional stratigraphy Sedimentary tectonics Regional tectonics Advanced historical geology Survey level paleontology Obviously not all portions of the book are relevant to all of the above courses We assume the reader will retain this book after the particular course is done and will use it as a reference book Hopefully others will obtain the book solely for reference purposes We believe it will be especially useful for the working geologist or academic geologist seeking generalized and some moderately detailed information about a region or geological time interval which is unfamiliar

People as an Agent of Environmental Change Rebecca A. Nicholson, 2000 The papers in this volume revisit one of the concerns which dominated environmental archaeology through the 1960s and 1970s namely the timing nature and extent of human impact on the environment The thirteen contributions reflect the diversity of approaches and ideas today and show how our understanding of the place of people in ecosystems is now more subtle There are papers on palynological evidence from the Strymon Delta in Macedonia prehistoric copper mining at Mount Gabriel Ireland fungal spores as anthropogenic indicators on Shetland prehistoric human impact on the prehistoric environments of Orkney North York Moors and the Mid Devon landscape mites as indicators of human impact in the Netherlands the disappearance of Elmids from lowland river systems in Britain and case studies from further afield palaeoenvironmental reconstruction in the Central
