

Guide to Cricket

Bowling

The Bowler's job is to bowl the ball towards the batsman, with the aim of getting the batsman out and/or restricting his scoring. Bowlers usually use a range of techniques to make the batting more difficult.

Swing Bowling

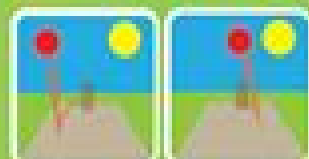

The bowler will spin one side of the ball which causes it to curve through the air when bowled.

Spin Bowling

The bowler will put spin on the ball when bowling. When the ball arrives on the ground it will rotate in direction. Spin bowlers are usually a lot slower than swing bowlers.

Out Swing In Swing

Off Spin Leg Spin

Batting

Two batsmen will stand at opposite ends of the pitch. The batsman on strike will attempt to score a run after hitting the ball bowled by the bowler. The batsman can score runs by running and switching ends or by hitting the ball past the boundary.

Overs

An over consists of 6 balls and is used as a measure for the length of a cricket match. Play switches ends upon every completed over.

Wickets

Whenever a batsman is out he is said to lose the wicket. If 10 wickets are lost then the innings are over as 11 men need to be at the crease. (see how out if the fielding team want to appeal to the umpire for an LBW they will shout "How's That?")

Runs

The winner of the game is decided by who has scored the most runs. Runs are scored by the batsman (see Batting).

RUNS	2	3	7
WICKETS	7
OVERS	4	5

Out?

Bowled:

The Bowler bowls a ball which hits the wicket.

Leg Before Wicket:

LBW ball hits the batsman's pads, when it would have gone on to hit the wicket.

Cought:

The ball is hit in the air by the batsman and is caught by a fielder.

Hit Wicket:

The Batsman knocks his own wicket.
