

DEBT, VIOLENCE, AND IMPERSONAL MARKETS: POLANYIAN MEDITATIONS

DAVID GRAEBER

If The Great Transformation will be remembered for anything a century from now, it will be as the definitive rejoinder to the great liberal myth. This is, of course, the assumption that there is something natural about what Polanyi called “self-regulating markets”, that they arise of their own accord as long as state interference doesn’t prevent them. Polanyi examined the very period when this ideology first emerged, and managed to demonstrate just how crucial government interference was in creating “the self-regulating market” to begin with—just as it has continued to be necessary to maintain it.

One need hardly point out that in the current, neoliberal age, Polanyi’s insights are more relevant than ever. The ideology that Polanyi felt was gone forever in the ‘40s has returned with a vengeance—returned to reap a terrible vengeance, in fact, on the most vulnerable of the people of the earth. Yet at the same time the intellectual landscape has shifted dramatically. Among what passes as the intellectual opposition, grand sweeping theory in the Polanyian tradition has fallen largely out of favor. At the same time, the high theorists of neoliberalism—at least, the most sophisticated of them—often appear more than happy to incorporate many of Polanyi’s insights. Most will, if pressed, be happy to admit that “the market” isn’t really an empirical object at all, that when they refer to “markets” they are really talking about abstract models, constructed by selecting only certain features of reality and intentionally ignore all others; and that of course one needs constant political work to maintain conditions where those models will take on any semblance of empirical form. Of course, when giving policy advice, these same economists will then turn around and declare that “the market”—now transformed from an abstract model to a quasi-deity—will punish those who disregard its sovereign dictates.

When arguments don’t even have to make logical sense, critique might well seem to lose its point. Nonetheless, it strikes me that new theoretical tools would be helpful here—if only because how we conceptualize the moment has everything to do with how we imagine alternatives. Polanyi wrote at an historical moment when it seemed that the very governments that had created self-regulating markets seemed to be in the process of transcending them. Today we’ve seen those same social democratic regimes often leading the way in stripping away social protections, and anti-capitalist movements increasingly moving away from any notion that the state—which is, after all, basically a means of organizing violence—can help solve anything.

Polanyian Meditations In Search Of A Post Critical Logic

Victor M. Corman

Polanyian Meditations In Search Of A Post Critical Logic:

Polanyian Meditations William H. Poteat, 1985 Recovering the Personal Dale W. Cannon, Ronald L. Hall, 2016-09-14

Modernity has radically challenged the assumptions that guide our ordinary lives as persons in ways we are not normally aware. We live our concrete lives taking for granted that personal decisions, desires, relationships, actions, aspirations, values, and knowledge are central to our existence. But in modernity we think of these matters as private, idiosyncratic, and subjective, even irrational. This modern conception of ourselves and the associated way of reflection, known as modern critical thinking, came to dominate our thinking; it culminates in the dualistic philosophy of René Descartes. This dualism has spawned a reductionist view of persons and tainted the personal with connotations of bias, partiality, and privacy, leaving us with the presumption that if we seek to be objective and intellectually respectable, we must expunge the personal. William H. Poteat's work in philosophical anthropology has confronted this concern head on. He undertakes a radical critique of the various forms of mind/body dualism and materialist monism that have dominated Western intellectual concepts of the person. In a unique style that Poteat calls post-critical, he uncovers the staggering incoherencies of these dualisms and shows how they have resulted in a loss of the personal in the modern age. He also formulates a way out of this modern cultural insanity. This constructive dimension of his thought is centered on his signature concept of the mind/body, the pre-reflective ground of personal existence. The twelve contributors in this collection explore outgrowths and implications of Poteat's thought. Recovering the Personal will be of interest to a broad range of intellectual readers with interests in philosophy, psychology, theology, and the humanities.

Speech and Political Practice Murray Jardine, 1998-01-01. Argues that rebuilding ethical communities will require a cultural reorientation from visually dominated to oral/aural experience and develops a speech-based conception of moral place that can set limits on the actions of individuals and communities.

Professing in the Postmodern Academy Stephen R. Haynes, 2002. Professing in the Postmodern Academy examines the landscape of religiously affiliated higher education in America from the perspective of faculty members who are critically committed to the future of church-related institutions. The book includes chapters on a variety of topics from members of the Rhodes Consultation on the Future of the Church-Related College, a project that has involved ninety church-related institutions since 1996. The book features an introduction by Stephen R Haynes director of the Rhodes Consultation that reviews twentieth century scholarship on religiously affiliated higher education chapters on the church related college s postmodern opportunity by Paul Lakeland Margaret Falls Corbitt and William Cahoy considerations of the academic vocation by Richard Kyte Elizabeth Newman and John Neary treatments of pedagogy and praxis by Julia O Brien Timothy Beal and Dominic Scibilia studies of mission and curriculum by Keith Graber Miller Marcia Bunge Jonathan Grieser and Corrie Norman and an afterword by Haynes The book provides a unique and innovative contribution to the literature on religion and higher education by giving voice to outstanding junior faculty willing to imagine a creative and vibrant future for the American church related college

Masterplots II Frank Northern Magill,1989 The Making and Unmaking of Technological Society Murray Jardine,2004 Our inability to make ethical sense of technology is at the root of a crisis This book advocates a Christianity that fully understands technology its responsibilities and its possibilities Politics of the Theological Barry Harvey,1995 What is the primary purpose of Christian theology What governs its deliberations and sets the standards by which its claims are evaluated In Politics of the Theological Barry Harvey argues that politics the art and science of human life in community provides the essential framework for answering these foundational questions According to Harvey the church is the community that models a new type of society to the world ordered around the habits and relations of Christ Theological inquiry helps the church to foster relationships that embody the divine offer of new life and challenge the dehumanizing practices of modern culture The realization of this new society in the Christian community becomes for all creation the historical sign of God s peaceable kingdom Pre/Text ,1981 Eric Voegelin's Dialogue with the Postmoderns Eric Voegelin,2004 This collection of essays endeavors to generate a dialogue between Eric Voegelin and other prominent twentieth century thinkers and explore some of the more perplexing issues in contemporary political theory Each essay rests on the underlying question is it possible or desirable to construct or discover political foundations without resorting to metaphysical or essentialist constructs The introduction focuses on the two nineteenth century thinkers Nietzsche and Husserl who have framed the debate about modernity and postmodernity thereafter the book examines Voegelin s ideas as compared to those of other twentieth century thinkers Discussed within the volume are Levinas and the precedence of ethics Ricoeur s theory of narrative representation Deleuze and the philosophy of immanence Voegelin s relationship to a speech dimension theory of human behavior and Patocka s theory of pre metaphysical transcendence in Socrates What will impress scholars most about this collection is the provocative dialogue created between Voegelin and other major thinkers of postmodernism that addresses the issue of establishing foundations without foundationalism Dialogue, Catalogue & Monologue Craig M. Gay,2008 Dialogue Catalogue Monologue is about words and the attitudes that we take toward them Its purpose is to encourage us to take the words we speak more seriously than we are perhaps in the habit of doing We have become so used to the deceptive subtleties and half truths that reach our eyes and ears that we have probably been tempted to lose our faith in words and to back away from the words of others We may even have been tempted to break faith with our own words and to back away from the words that we speak Craig Gay suggests that this is to back away from life itself and that our common future hinges on the recovery of dialogue Our recovery of dialogue however does not in the end depend simply upon our own efforts Dialogue never has If our words enable us to build up a common world if they enable us to say we if it is given to them to bear any fruit at all in this world this reflects the fact that we are graciously allowed to participate in the creative potency of the divine Word After all we were brought into being and are at every moment preserved in existence by words that God has spoken and continues to speak Philosophy East & West ,1986
