Illiterate Geography in Classical Athens and Rome Daniela Dueck, 2020-11-26 This study is devoted to the channels through which geographic knowledge circulated in classical societies outside of textual transmission It explores understanding of geography among the non elites as opposed to scholarly and scientific geography solely in written form which was the province of a very small number of learned people It deals with non literary knowledge of geography geography not derived from texts as it was available to people educated or not who did not read geographic works This main issue is composed of two central questions how if at all was geographic data available outside of textual transmission and in contexts in which there was no need to write or read And what could the public know of geography In general three groups of sources are relevant to this quest oral communications preserved in writing public non textual performances and visual artefacts and monuments All of these are examined as potential sources for the aural and visual geographic knowledge of Greco Roman publics This volume will be of interest to anyone working on geography in the ancient world and to those studying non elite culture further research Diachrony José M. González, 2015-12-14 Not a few of the more prominent and persistent controversies among classical scholars about approaches and methods arise from a failure to appreciate the fundamental role of time in structuring the interpretation of Greek culture Diachrony showcases the corresponding importance of diachronic models for the study of ancient Greek literature and culture Diachronic models of culture reach beyond mere historical change to the systemically evolving dynamics of cultural institutions practices and artifacts The papers collected here illustrate the construction and proper use of such models They emphasize the complementarity of synchronic and diachronic perspectives and highlight the need to assess how well diachronic models fit history The contributors to this volume strive to be methodologically explicit as they tackle a wide range of subjects with a variety of diachronic approaches Their work shows both the difficulty and the promise of diachronic analysis Our incomplete knowledge of Greek antiquity throughout time and the Greeks own preoccupation with the past in the construction of their present make diachronic analysis not just invaluable but indispensable for the study of ancient Greek literature and culture Subject Guide to Books in Print, 1997 Fake News in Ancient Greece Diego De Brasi, Amphilochios Papathomas, Theofanis Tsiampokalos, 2024-12-02 Scholars have recognized that fake news is not a phenomenon peculiar to the 21st century While efforts for a more focused approach to fake news in the ancient world have been carried out in the field of Roman history the phenomenon of fake news in ancient Greece has received limited attention The contributions in this volume offer a selective approach to this phenomenon by applying media and cultural studies instruments to ancient texts They pinpoint parallels and differences between ancient and modern fake news by employing methods of literary and cultural studies as well as historical documentary analysis of ancient sources In particular they explore questions such as To what extent does reflection on the concepts of truth lie and opinion influence ancient Greek political rhetorical discourse What is the political or social function of embedding misleading information in ancient Greek historiographical texts or pamphlets Which intentions are pursued with the help of fake news in literary and documentary texts Can parallels be drawn with modern approaches to fake news Thus the volume investigates the mechanisms that historically lay behind the creation dissemination and adaptation of misleading information The Princeton Sourcebook in Comparative Literature David Damrosch, Natalie Melas, Mbongiseni Buthelezi, 2009 Key essays on comparative literature from the eighteenth century to today As comparative literature reshapes itself in today's globalizing age it is essential for students and teachers to look deeply into the discipline's history and its present possibilities The Princeton Sourcebook in Comparative Literature is a wide ranging anthology of classic essays and important recent statements on the mission and methods of comparative literary studies This pioneering collection brings together thirty two pieces from foundational statements by Herder Madame de Staël and Nietzsche to work by a range of the most influential comparatists writing today including Lawrence Venuti Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak and Franco Moretti Gathered here are manifestos and counterarguments essays in definition and debates on method by scholars and critics from the United States
