Psychoanalysis Historiography And Feminist Theory The Search For Critical Method:

Psychoanalysis, Historiography, and Feminist Theory Katherine Kearns, 1997-10-16 In this book Katherine Kearns explores the relationship of history to narrative. She combines psychoanalysis with recent feminist theory to reveal the hidden assumptions behind the construction of any historical narrative. Her alternative approach, one she labels psychohistoriography, rejects the notion that certain historical categories are inalienably given. By introducing insights derived from psychoanalysis and critical theory, Kearns expands our conception of what can legitimately count as historical evidence.

Psychoanalysis, Historiography, and the Nazi Camps Dan Stone, 2024-07-10 In the postwar years Dutch survivors Eddy de Wind, Louis Micheels, and Elie A. Cohen, who went on to become practicing psychoanalysts, penned accounts of their survival of the Nazi camps. Their sober assessments contrast sharply with those by Bruno Bettelheim and Viktor Frankl, which emphasized decisiveness, positive thinking, and resistance, missing the fact that many Holocaust victims with those characteristics or other qualities did not survive. De Wind's, Micheels', and Cohen's accounts are more sober, self-critical, and shaped by analytical practice. By analyzing them anew and comparing them with accounts by female doctors who survived Block 10 in Auschwitz, this book argues that their theories of survival accord with contemporary sensibilities in psychoanalysis and Holocaust historiography. Psychoanalytic concepts have changed over time in response to greater understanding of the Holocaust, and recent Holocaust historiography makes us more receptive to insights that were unfashionable in the first postwar decades.

History, Historians, and Autobiography Jeremy D. Popkin, 2005-05-09 Though history and autobiography both claim to tell true stories about the past, historians have traditionally rejected first-person accounts as subjective and therefore unreliable. What then asks Jeremy D. Popkin in History, Historians, and Autobiography are we to make of the ever-increasing number of professional historians who are publishing stories of their own lives? And how is this recent development changing the nature of history writing, the historical profession, and the genre of autobiography? Drawing on the theoretical work of contemporary critics of autobiography and the philosophy of Paul Ricoeur, Popkin reads the autobiographical classics of Edward Gibbon and Henry Adams and the memoirs of contemporary historians such as Emmanuel Le Roy Ladurie, Peter Gay, Jill Ker Conway, and many others. He reveals the contributions historians' life stories make to our understanding of the human experience. Historians' autobiographies, he shows, reveal how scholars arrive at their vocations, the difficulties of writing about modern professional life, and the ways in which personal stories can add to our understanding of historical events such as war, political movements, and the traumas of the Holocaust. An engrossing overview of the way historians view themselves and their profession, this work will be of interest to readers concerned with the ways in which we understand the past as well as anyone interested in the art of life writing.

Peter Ackroyd J. Gibson, J. Wolfreys, 2000-04-07 Peter Ackroyd's The Ludic and Labyrinthine Text offers the reader the first major critical study in English of one of Britain's most inventive, playful, and significant writers of the twentieth century. This study playfully yet rigorously engages with these aspects of literary stylistics and personal and national identity so important in Ackroyd's work. Rejecting the postmodern label previously attached to the author, Gibson and Wolfreys provide a consideration of all Ackroyd's writing to date from his poetry and critical thought to his novels and biographies, offering an indispensable account to anyone interested in Ackroyd and the condition of the novel at the end of the twentieth century.

Sceptical History Hélène Bowen Raddeker, 2007-04-30 A highly original work in history and theory, this survey considers major themes including identity, class and sexual difference, and weaves them into debates on the nature and point of history. Sceptical History arrives at new ways of doing history that consider non-Western history and feminist approaches. Using a wide range of historical and cultural contexts, the study draws extensively on feminist scholarship, both feminist history and postcolonial feminism.

Caribbean Slave Revolts and the British Abolitionist Movement Gelien Matthews, 2006 Focusing on slave revolts that took place in Barbados in 1816, in Demerara in 1823, and in Jamaica in 1831-32, Matthews identifies four key aspects in British abolitionist propaganda regarding Caribbean slavery: the denial that antislavery activism prompted slave revolts; the attempt to understand and recount slave uprisings from the slaves' perspectives; the portrayal of slave rebels as victims of armed suppressors and as agents of the antislavery movement; and the presentation of revolts as a rationale against the continuance of slavery. She makes use of previously overlooked publications of British abolitionists to prove that their language changed over time in response to slave uprisings.

Women, Theatre and Performance Maggie Barbara Gale, Viv Gardner, 2000 This collection addresses key questions in women's theatre history and retrieves a number of previously hidden histories of women performers. The essays range across the past 300 years; topics covered include Susanna Centlivre and the notion of intertheatricality; gender and theatrical space; the repositioning of women performers such as Wagner's Muse, Willhelmina Schröder Devrient, the Comtesse de Francais, Mademoiselle Mars, Mme Arnould Plessey, and the actresses of the Russian serf theatre.

Resisting History Rhodri Hayward, 2007 In this book, Rhodri Hayward examines the cumulative attempts of theologians, historians, and psychologists to create a consistent and rational narrative capable of containing the inexplicable. He argues that the psychological theories we routinely use to make sense of supernatural experience were born out of struggles between popular mystics and conservative authorities.

Writing Ancient History Neville Morley, 1999 How do ancient historians pursue their craft? From the evidence of coins, pottery, shards, remains of buildings, works of art, and above all literary texts, all of which have survived more or less accidentally from antiquity, they fashion works of history. But how exactly do they go about reconstructing and representing the past? How should history be written? These and related questions are the subject of Neville Morley's engaging introduction to the theory and philosophy of history. Intended for students and teachers not only of ancient history but of historiography, the philosophy of history, and classics, his book addresses the implications of debates over methodological and theoretical issues for the practice of ancient history. At the present time, Morley says, students of ancient history are left to come to their own understanding of the field through a process of trial and error In his view too many professors regard questions of theory and methodology as pointless distractions from the business of actually doing history Worse these questions may even be perceived as a threat to the subject Asserting that more attention must be given to fundamental matters Morley considers such topics as the nature of historical narrative style in historical writing the use and abuse of sources and the reasons for studying history
