Psychology And The Built Environment:

Psychology and the Built Environment David V. Canter, Terence Lee, 1974 Psychology and the Built Environment D. Canter, T. Lee, 1975-01 Spaces for Children T.G. David, C.S. Weinstein, 2013-11-11 As a developmental psychologist with a strong interest in children's response to the physical environment I take particular pleasure in writing a foreword to the present volume. It provides impressive evidence of the concern that workers in environmental psychology and environmental design are displaying for the child as a user of the designed environment and indicates a recognition of the need to apply theory and findings from developmental and environmental psychology to the design of environments for children. This seems to me to mark a shift in focus and concern from the earlier days of the interaction between environmental designers and psychologists that occurred some two decades ago and provided the impetus for the establishment of environmental psychology as a subdiscipline. Whether because children though they are consumers of designed environments are not the architect's clients or because it seemed easier to work with adults who could be asked to make ratings of environmental spaces and comment on them at length a focus on the child in interaction with environments was comparatively slow in developing in the field of environment and behavior. As the chapters of the present volume indicate that situation is no longer true today and this is a change that all concerned with the well being and optimal functioning of children will welcome.

Psychology and the Aesthetics of the Built Environment Arthur E. Stamps, 2013-04-17 Recent legislative trends in the United States, the United Kingdom and many other countries now require accurate and efficient assessment of environmental aesthetics. Most of this assessment is currently undertaken using traditional design judgment but when the powers of the government are used to enforce policy the scope of the aesthetic evaluation requires consideration of questions such as: What concepts will aesthetic decision makers need to perform their intended function? How can they obtain the information they need? and What is currently known about environmental aesthetics? This book answers those questions with a solid logical theory of environmental aesthetics, empirical evidence covering 277 studies, 41 000 respondents and 12 000 stimuli and seven case histories showing how the theory can be applied to actual aesthetic decisions. The book proposes a unified protocol for measuring the magnitude of aesthetic impacts. It also applies that protocol to 94 specific findings which span a very wide range of issues.
