Measurement in Health Psychology, volume II Paola Gremigni, Giulia Casu, Antonio de Padua Serafim, Victor Zaia, 2025-09-25 Health psychology is the investigation of psychological and behavioral processes in health illness and healthcare It brings together biological psychological and social components to investigate the behavior of healthy or ill people and the decision making processes that may influence the delivery of healthcare services Several issues and factors are still understudied in health psychology Psychological effects of the Covid 19 outbreaks caregiving experiences work related stress and life work balance quality of life of sexual minorities young generations orientations and motivation for health or impacts of the new media on people's mental health are just a few examples of phenomena that remain partially explained A critical issue in health psychology is measurement Researchers may indeed use measures to elucidate processes to advance theory and evidence to gain a greater understanding of the observed phenomena or to assess the effects of interventions delivered to improve health and healthcare outcomes Current Catalog National Library of Medicine

Thompson, 2013-06-29 Regardless of culture most adult humans report experiencing similar feelings such as anger fear humor and joy Such subjective emotional states however are not universal Members of some cultures deny experiencing specific emotions such as fear or grief Moreover within any culture individuals differ widely in their self reports of both the variety and intensity of their emotions Some people report a vivid tapestry of positive and negative emotional experiences Other people report that a single emotion such as depression or fear totally dominates their existences Still others report flat and barren emotional lives Over the past 100 years scientists have proposed numerous rival explanations of why such large individual differences in emotions occur Various authors have offered anthropological biochemical ethological neurological psychological and sociological models of human emotions Indeed the sheer number of competing theories precludes a comprehensive review in a single volume Accordingly only a representative sample of models are discussed in this book and many equally important theories have been omitted These omissions were not intended to prejudice the reader in favor of any particular conceptual framework Rather this selective coverage was intended to focus attention upon the empirical findings that contemporary theories attempt to explain Mind/Body Integration S. Ancoli, Erik Peper, M.
Quinn, 2012-12-06 Biofeedback training is a research methodology and training procedure through which people can learn voluntary control over their internal physiological systems It is a merger of multiple disciplines with interest deriving from many sources from basic understanding of psychophysiology to a desire for enhanced self awareness The goals of biofeedback are to develop an increased awareness of relevant internal physiological functions to establish control over these functions to generalize control from an experimental or clinical setting to everyday life and to focus attention on mind body integration Biofeedback is explored in many different settings In the university biofeed back equipment and applications can be found in the departments of experi mental and clinical psychology counseling physiology biology education and the theater arts as well as in the health service student infirmary Outside the university biofeedback may be found in different departments of hospitals such as physical medicine private clinics education and self awareness groups psychotherapy practices and elsewhere Its growth is still expanding and excite ment is still rising as a result of biofeedback s demonstration that autonomic functions can be brought under voluntary control and that the long standing arti ficial separation between mind body and consciousness can be disproven
