Michael A. Caldero

Policing As Though People Matter:

Police Ethics Michael A. Caldero, 2014-10-13 This book provides an examination of noble cause how it emerges as a fundamental principle of police ethics and how it can provide the basis for corruption The noble cause a commitment to doing something about bad people is a central ends based police ethic that can be corrupted when officers violate the law on behalf of personally held moral values This book is about the power that police use to do their work and how it can corrupt police at the individual and organizational levels It provides students of policing with a realistic understanding of the kinds of problems they will confront in the practice of police work

Serve and Protect Tobias Winright, 2020-11-13 This collection of essays on policing and the use of force while written over the course of the last twenty five years remains relevant and timely Although issues in policing and questions about excessive force and brutality have been addressed by criminologists sociologists philosophers and criminal justice ethicists only a handful of theological ethicists treat this pressing matter While the Christian moral tradition has a voluminous record of theological attention to violence and nonviolence war and peace there is a dearth of references to policing And most considerations of criminal justice issues by Christians and their churches concentrate on prison reform or abolition and the death penalty but not policing These essays authored by a theological ethicist possessing professional experience in law enforcement seek to fill this curious gap They offer a framework for moral reasoning concerning the justification for police use of force and the just application of such force and they propose just policing as a model that is consonant with promoting a just peace in communities and society In addition they explore the implications of such an approach for wider international questions about just war terrorism the responsibility to protect and post war justice

Policing as Though People Matter Dorothy Guyot, 1991 In this work Dorothy Guyot asks What makes a good police department In analyzing the transformation of the police department in Troy New York she explains a set of standards by which the quality of police service can be judged and illustrates a way to improve services over the long run Throughout her case study and analysis Guyot asks penetrating questions about the performance of police departments She maintains that when police officers are treated as professionals by their department they will act professionally toward citizens This examination of fifteen years of policymaking within a single department looks at policing as a complex social service in an urban environment Rather than accepting the traditional chain of command authoritarian model of police administration Guyot draws an analogy to hospital organization and suggests that the practitioner whether a physician or a cop on the beat performs the service with a tremendous amount of discretion It follows that better management tactics at the police chief level as well as better employment policies will result in more responsible and dedicated policing by officers The author demonstrates how under the leadership of George W O Connor the Troy P D changed from a backward department to one that promotes competence as well as concern for citizens among its individual officers The book is organized by issues and provides a full picture of how upgrading can be achieved through clear and specific goals Throughout this case study

Guyot provides many examples of the behavior of police officers on the street to illustrate the differences made by restructuring the department Author note Dorothy Guyot a faculty member at St John s College Annapolis was previously an Associate Professor at the School of Criminal Justice Rutgers University and at John Jay College of Criminal Justice She was also a management analyst for the Yonkers Police Department International Perspectives in Urban Studies ,1995
