Psychology Of Emotion Theories Of Emotion In Perspective:

The Psychology of Emotion K. T. Strongman, 1996-09-12 The Psychology of Emotion commences with a discussion of the nature of theory and its appraisal This is both in general and also in the field of emotion in particular Theories of emotion are categorized and then considered from several bases These include experience behaviour physiology cognition specific emotions development social clinical individual differences philosophy sociology anthropology culture linguistics and history Themes are abstracted including for example biology gender social constructionism and post modernism The author presents these theoretical issues encompassing most current emotion theories including some of the past and extends the issues further than the field of psychology He goes on to make authoritative judgements about the relative merits of the theories and finally extracts whatever common themes there might be

Emotion Theory: The Routledge Comprehensive Guide

Emotions, Cognition, and Behavior Carroll E. Izard, Jerome Kagan, Robert B. Zajonc, 1984 The seventeen contributions to this volume demonstrate the enormous progress that has been achieved recently in our understanding of emotions Current cognitive formulations and information processing models are challenged by new theory and by a solid body of empirical research presented by the distinguished authors Addressing the problem of the relationship between developmental social and clinical psychology and psychophysiology all agree that emotion concepts can be operationally defined and investigated as both independent and dependent variables Cognitive and affective processes can no longer be studied in isolation taken together the chapters provide a useful map of an increasingly important and active boundary

The Psychology of Emotion K. T. Strongman, 2003-11-21 The multi disciplinary approach taken should appeal to those investigating emotion in the fields of philosophy and the social sciences as well as to psychology students and lecturers Those studying or teaching emotion should find this book a valuable resource

Cognitive Perspectives on Emotion and Motivation V. Hamilton, Gordon H. Bower, Nico H. Frijda, 2012-12-06 This book presents the contributions of the members of an Advanced Research Workshop on Cognitive Science Perspectives on Emotion Motivation and Cognition The Workshop funded mainly by the NATO

Scientific Affairs Division together with a contribution from the British Economic and Social Research Council was conducted at Il Ciocco Tuscany Italy 21-27 June 1987. The venue for our discussions was ideal: a quiet holiday hotel 500m high in the Apennine mountain range approached by a mile of perilously steep winding narrow road. The isolation was conducive to concentrated discussions on the topics of the Workshop. The reason for the Workshop was a felt need for researchers from disparate but related approaches to cognition, emotion and motivation to communicate their perspectives and arguments to one another. To take just one example, the framework of information processing and the metaphor of mind as a computer has wrought a major revolution in psychological theories of cognition. That framework has radically altered the way psychologists conceptualize perception, memory, language, thought and action. Those advances have formed the intellectual substrate for the cognitive science perspective on mental life.

Emotion and Adaptation Richard S. Lazarus, 1994-06-09. In this landmark work, Richard Lazarus, one of the world's foremost authorities, offers a comprehensive treatment of the psychology of emotion, its role in adaptation, and the issues that must be addressed to understand it. The work provides a complete theory of emotional processes, explaining how different emotions are elicited and expressed and how the emotional range of individuals develops over their lifetime. The author's approach puts emotion in a central role as a complex, patterned organic reaction to both daily events and long-term efforts on the part of the individual to survive, flourish, and achieve. In his view, emotions cannot be divorced from other functions, whether biological, social, or cognitive, and express the intimate personal meaning of what individuals experience. As coping and adapting processes, they are seen as part of the ongoing effort to monitor changes, stimuli, and stresses arising from the environment. After defining emotion and discussing issues of classification and measurement, Lazarus turns to the topics of motivation, cognition, and causality as key concepts in this theory. Next, he looks at individual emotions, both negative and positive, and examines their development in terms of social influences and individual events. Finally, he considers the long-term consequences of emotion on physical health and well-being and the treatment and prevention of emotional dysfunction. The book draws together the relevant research from a wide variety of sources and distills the author's pioneering work in the field over the last forty years. As a comprehensive treatment of the emotions, the book will interest students, clinicians, and researchers involved in personality, social, and clinical psychology, as well as cognitive and developmental psychology. It may also be used as a supplemental textbook in courses on the psychology of adjustment, emotion, and feeling.

The Psychology and Biology of Emotion Robert Plutchik, 1994. The importance of emotions in everyday life is the subject of this systematic study, which presents students with a broad summary of 30 years of research and theory on emotion, covering both contemporary and historical theories.

The Science of Emotion Randolph R. Cornelius, 1996. This text provides a description of both classic and contemporary theory and research on emotions within each of the four major theoretical traditions that have shaped and continue to shape how psychologists think about emotions. Written in an informal style, it explains how each perspective defines constructs theories about and conducts research on emotion and presents four often very different pictures of what emotions are thought to be      Encyclopedia of Human Emotions David Levinson, James J. Ponzetti, Peter F. Jorgensen, 1999 This work brings together informations from across the disciplines to look at what is known about the nature cases expression and societal role of human emotions throughout history and across cultures      The Handbook of Life-Span Development, Volume 2, 2010-08-09 In the past fifty years scholars of human development have been moving from studying change in humans within sharply defined periods to seeing many more of these phenomenon as more profitably studied over time and in relation to other processes The Handbook of Life Span Development Volume 2 Social and Emotional Development presents the study of human development conducted by the best scholars in the 21st century Social workers counselors and public health workers will receive coverage of the social and emotional aspects of human change across the lifespan      Psychological Basis of Psychiatry M. Thambirajah, 2005 A textbook of psychology for trainee psychiatrists preparing for examinations      Critical Debates on Quantitative Psychology and Measurement: Revived and Novel Perspectives on Fundamental Problems Jana Uher, Jan Ketil Arnulf, Barbara Hanfstingl, 2025-11-14 Psychology's continued crises in replicability validity generalisability and thus confidence in its findings are currently attributed primarily to questionable research practices QRPs e.g. p hacking HARKing cherry picking Popular pertinent debates therefore centre on proposals for remedying inappropriate method applications e.g. larger samples robust statistics pre registration replication Replicable non random effects of psychological interventions and differentiations between individuals are essential for applied purposes But current approaches to replicability validity and psychometric modelling are merely pragmatic providing evidence of just utility to discriminate well and consistently between cases and in ways considered important e.g. social relevance relations to future outcomes Yet without understanding the study phenomena in themselves e.g. individuals experience beliefs thought processes and without elaborating how relevant features of them can be made amenable to quantitative investigation and if at all the quantity objection the actual causes of replicable quantitative findings cannot be explored These causes however may be completely unrelated to the actual study phenomena e.g. methodomorphism This concerns in particular the attributes and latent constructs studied in psychology given that these are theoretical and statistical concepts that are attributed and construed as means of investigation and that only refer to but do not constitute the actual study phenomena in themselves We believe the currently debated deficiencies of quantitative practices in psychology are just surface symptoms whereas fundamental problems e.g. the inappropriateness of statistical assumptions for psychical phenomena and the actual root causes underlying psychology's crises and disputes around its scientific status are still hardly addressed With this Research Topic we want to give new impetus to critical debates on the epistemological and methodological foundations of quantitative methods and measurement in psychology including problems long known but still hardly considered Examples are The behavioural and psychical phenomena's non ergodicity rendering sample level statistics

uninformative about individual level phenomena Psychometricians alignment of results to statistical theories rather than to features of the study phenomena biasing inferences on the latter Ideas that laypeople s intuitive judgements could reveal quantitative structures in complex largely unobservable phenomena The still unsupported claim that psychical phenomena could have quantitative properties at all and could thus be measured The fact that psychometric structures shown for verbal item judgements can also be produced by semantic and Artificial Intelligence AI algorithms e g ChatGPT without collecting any empirical data Still most quantitative psychologists seem fairly unconcerned about the strong reliance on everyday language e g in ratings scales and the imprecise concepts of psychological measurement perhaps because their consequences do not become as straightforwardly apparent as in other disciplines such as in physics chemistry and medicine where imprecise measurement can entail the collapse of buildings chemical explosions or drug overdoses But where does the loose jargon around measurement variables and psychometrics go seriously wrong in psychology These and further contradictions problems and challenges underlying established quantitative practices in psychology must be addressed to tackle the discipline s continued crises and to develop new approaches that are needed to advance psychology as a science We invite from all fields contributions that critically explore and open up new perspectives on the foundations of quantification and measurement in psychology including perspectives still hardly considered e g qualitative mathematics complex dynamic systems fuzzy systems modelling machine learning We are also interested in methods for generating quantitative data either executed by persons e g time based observations computer based coding or by automated technology e g ecological momentary monitoring life logging reality mining However other than commonly done we are explicitly not seeking proposals for improving specific techniques of data analysis e g statistical or latent variable models Instead our focus is on making explicit and scrutinising the implicitly underlying rationales and fundamental principles thus the theory philosophy and methodology on which quantitative research in psychology currently is or should be built in the future This also includes critical views on whether or not quantitative investigations are meaningful at all for a science exploring behaviour mind and society and thus also contributions to the psychology sociology and philosophy of science in this field
