

Understanding the psychology of Individual Differences

Definitions of Individual Differences:

Good, C.V.:

"The variation or deviations among individual is regard to a single characteristics or a number of characteristics, those differences which in their totality distinguish one individual from another."

Skinner, C.E.:

"Today we think of individual differences as including any measurable aspect of the total personality."

Drever James:

"Variations or deviations from the average of the group, with respect to the mental or physical characters, occurring in the individual member of the group are individual differences."

Woodworth, R.S. and Marquis, D.G.:

"Individual differences are found in all psychological characteristics physical mental abilities, knowledge, habit, personality and character traits."

"The psychology of individual differences is largely the study of group differences. This study classifies individuals by age, traits, sex, race, social class and so on, and observes the differences within and between those groups. Physical, mental, social and cultural differences etc. are being studied, under individual differences." – John P.De Ceeceo

Perhaps the first task of every teacher in a class should be to know and study individual differences among his pupils. Individual differences in bodily appearance and physique, habits and skills, interests and temperaments, abilities and attainments have already been recognised.

According to Skinner, "Today we think of individual differences as including any measurable aspect of the total personality." It is clear from this definition of individual differences that it comprehends every aspect of human personality which is in some manner measurable.

Types of Individual Differences:

1. Physical differences:

Shortness or tallness of stature, darkness or fairness of complexion, fatness, thinness, or weakness are various physical individual differences.

2. Differences in intelligence:

There are differences in intelligence level among different individuals. We can classify the individuals from super-normal (above 120 I.Q.) to idiots (from 0 to 50 I.Q.) on the basis of their intelligence level.
