Judgment and Decision Making at Work Scott Highhouse, Reeshad S. Dalal, Eduardo Salas, 2013-09-05 Employees are constantly making decisions and judgments that have the potential to affect themselves their families their work organizations and on some occasion even the broader societies in which they live A few examples include deciding which job applicant to hire setting a production goal judging one's level of job satisfaction deciding to steal from the cash register agreeing to help organize the company's holiday party forecasting corporate tax rates two years later deciding to report a coworker for sexual harassment and predicting the level of risk inherent in a new business venture In other words a great many topics of interest to organizational researchers ultimately reduce to decisions made by employees Yet numerous entreaties notwithstanding industrial and organizational psychologists typically have not incorporated a judgment and decision making perspective in their research The current book begins to remedy the situation by facilitating cross pollination between the disciplines of organizational psychology and decision making The book describes both laboratory and more naturalistic field research on judgment and decision making and applies it to core topics of interest to industrial and organizational psychologists performance appraisal employee selection individual differences goals leadership teams and stress among others The book also suggests ways in which industrial and organizational psychology research can benefit the discipline of judgment and decision making The authors of the chapters in this book conduct research at the intersection of organizational psychology and decision making and consequently are uniquely positioned to bridging the divide between the two disciplines

Time Pressure and Stress in Human Judgment and Decision Making A.J. Maule, O. Svenson, 2013-03-09 Some years ago we the editors of this volume found out about each other's deeply rooted interest in the concept of time the usage of time and the effects of shortage of time on human thought and behavior Since then we have fostered the idea of bringing together different perspectives in this area We are now therefore very content that our idea has materialized in the present volume There is both anecdotal and empirical evidence to suggest that time constraints may affect behavior Managers and other professional decision makers frequently identify time pressure as a major constraint on their behavior Isenberg 1984 Chamberlain and Zika 1990 provide empirical support for this view showing that complaints of insufficient time are the most frequently reported everyday minor stressors or hassles for all groups of people except the elderly Similarly studies in occupational settings have identified time pressure as one of the central components of workload Derrich 1988 O'Donnell Eggemeier 1986

Intuition in Judgment and Decision Making Henning Plessner, Cornelia Betsch, Tilmann Betsch, 2011-05-20 The central goal of this volume is to bring the learning perspective into the discussion of intuition in judgment and decision making The book gathers recent work on intuitive decision making that goes beyond the current dominant heuristic processing perspective However that does not mean that the book will strictly oppose this perspective The unique perspective of this book will help to tie together these different conceptualizations of intuition and develop an integrative approach to the psychological understanding of intuition in judgment and decision making Accordingly some of the chapters reflect prior research from the heuristic processing perspective in the new light of the learning perspective This book provides a representative overview of what we currently know about intuition in judgment and decision making The authors provide latest theoretical developments integrative frameworks and state of the art reviews of research in the laboratory and in the field Moreover some chapters deal with applied topics Intuition in Judgment and Decision Making aims not only at the interest of students and researchers of psychology but also at scholars from neighboring social and behavioral sciences such as economy sociology political sciences and neurosciences
