Lions

Lions live in open plains or savannas in Africa and India. The lion is the "King of Beasts."
Male lions have tan colored coats and dark manes.

Lions are good tree climbers, and can climb high up in a tree. A lioness will have two cubs at a time. She takes care of her cubs for about one year.

Lions live and hunt in groups or prides. Together, they hunt big animals like zebras or bison.

There are now fewer lions in the wild, and they are now at risk of extinction.

Tigers

Tigers are found only in dense forests or in jungles.

Tigers are orange with brown and black stripes across their bodies, and have fur around the face.

They like to swim, and they are good jumpers. A tigress usually has two to four cubs at a time, and she feeds them until they are about two years old.

Tigers are very powerful and aggressive. They have long teeth, strong jaws, and big paws which allow them to hunt big animals alone.

There are very few tigers left today. They are already endangered, or at risk of extinction.
