Constant-Scale Natural Boundary Mapping to Reveal Global and Cosmic Processes Pamela Elizabeth Clark, Chuck Clark, 2013-09-06 Whereas conventional maps can be expressed as outward expanding formulae with well defined central features and relatively poorly defined edges Constant Scale Natural Boundary CSNB maps have well defined boundaries that result from natural processes and thus allow spatial and dynamic relationships to be observed in a new way useful to understanding these processes CSNB mapping presents a new approach to visualization that produces maps markedly different from those produced by conventional cartographic methods In this approach any body can be represented by a 3D coordinate system For a regular body with its surface relatively smooth on the scale of its size locations of features can be represented by definite geographic grid latitude and longitude and elevation or deviation from the triaxial ellipsoid defined surface A continuous surface on this body can be segmented its distinctive regional terranes enclosed and their inter relationships defined by using selected morphologically identifiable relief features e g continental divides plate boundaries river or current systems In this way regions of distinction on a large essentially spherical body can be mapped as two dimensional facets with their boundaries representing regional to global scale asymmetries e g continental crust continental and oceanic crust on the Earth farside original thicker crust and nearside thinner impact punctuated crust on the Moon In an analogous manner an irregular object such as an asteroid with a surface that is rough on the scale of its size would be logically segmented along edges of its impact generated faces Bounded faces are imagined with hinges at occasional points along boundaries resulting in a foldable shape model Thus bounded faces grow organically out of the most compelling natural features Obvious boundaries control the map s extremities and peripheral regions are not dismembered or grossly distorted as in conventional map projections 2D maps and 3D models grow out of an object s most obvious face or terrane edges instead of arbitrarily by imposing a regular grid system or using regularly shaped facets to represent an irregular surface NASA Technical Memorandum ,1991 Planetary Cartography and GIS Henrik Hargitai,2019 This book approaches geological geomorphological and topographical mapping from the point in the workflow at which science ready datasets are available Though there have been many individual projects on dynamic maps and online GISs in which coding and data processing are given precedence over cartographic principles cartography is more than just processing and displaying spatial data However there are currently no textbooks on this rapidly changing field and methods tend to be shared informally Addressing this gap in the literature the respective chapters outline many topics pertaining to cartography and mapping such as the role and definition of planetary cartography and vs Geographic Information Science theoretical background and practical methodologies in geological mapping science ready versus public ready products a goal procedure focused practical manual of the most commonly used software in planetary mapping which includes generic ArcGIS and its extensions JMARS and specific tools HiView Cratertools etc extracting topographic information from images thematic mapping climate geophysics surface modeling change detection landing site selection shared maps dynamic maps on the web planetary GIS interfaces crowdsourcing crater counting techniques irregular bodies geological unit symbology mapping center activities and web services All chapters were prepared by authors who have actually produced geological maps or GISs for NASA the USGS DLR ESA or MIIGAİK Taken together they offer an excellent resource for all planetary scientists whose research depends on mapping and for students of astrogeology Mapping the Next Millennium Stephen S.
