The Moral Wager Malcolm Murray,2007-05-05 In the following chapters I offer an evolutionary account of morality and from that extrapolate a version of contractarianism I call consent theory Game theory helps to highlight the evolution of morality as a resolution of interpersonal conflicts under strategic negotiation It is this emphasis on strategic negotiation that underwrites the idea of consent Consent theory differs from other contractarian models by abandoning reliance on rational self interest in favour of evolutionary adaptation From this more emphasis will be placed on consent as natural convergence rather than consent as an idealization My picture of contractarianism then ends up looking more like the relativist model offered by Harman rather than the rational or pseudo rational model offered by Gauthier let alone the Kantian brands of Rawls or Scanlon So at least some of my discussion will dwell on why it is no loss to abandon hope for the universal categorical morality that rational models promise In the introduction I offer the betting analogy that underwrites the remaining picture There are some bets where the expected utility is positive though the odds of winning on this particular occasion are exceedingly low In such cases we cannot hope to give an argument that taking the bet is rational The only thing we can say is that those predisposed to take this kind of bet on these kinds of occasions will do better than those with other dispositions so long as such games occur often enough     The Assault on International Law Jens David Ohlin, 2014-12-22 International law presents a conceptual riddle Why comply with it when there is no world government to enforce it The United States has a long history of skepticism towards international law but 9 11 ushered in a particularly virulent phase of American exceptionalism as the US drifted away from international institutions and conventions Although American politicians and their legal advisors are often the public face of this attack the root of this movement is a coordinated and deliberate attack by law professors hostile to its philosophical foundations including Eric Posner Jack Goldsmith Adrian Vermeule and John Yoo In a series of influential writings they have claimed that since states are motivated primarily by self interest compliance with international law is nothing more than high minded talk These abstract arguments provide a foundation for dangerous legal conclusions that international law is largely irrelevant to determining how and when terrorists can be captured or killed that the US President alone should be directing the War on Terror without significant input from Congress or the judiciary that US courts should not hear lawsuits alleging violations of international law and that the US should block any international criminal court with jurisdiction over Americans These polemical accounts have ultimately triggered America's pernicious withdrawal from international cooperation In The Assault on International Law Jens David Ohlin exposes the mistaken assumptions of these New Realists in particular their impoverished utilization of rational choice theory In contrast he provides an alternate vision of international law based on an innovative theory of human rationality According to Ohlin rationality requires that agents follow through on their plans and commitments even when faced with opportunities for defection as long as the original plan was beneficial for the agent Seen in the light of this planning theory of rational agency international law is the product of nation states cooperating to escape a brutish State of Nature a result that is not only legally binding but also in each state's self interest     Comptes Rendus Philosophiques ,1999     Journal of Economic Literature ,1999     The Social
