Tips & Techniques

When I know I am going to make the same project several times, I cut a master copy of the pattern pieces from a darker or brighter color of plastic canvas. It makes cutting the pattern pieces simpler and easier on the eyes.

—Bonnie Dominguez, California

I got tired of counting plastic canvas holes. From scraps, I cut pieces measuring 10 holes, 20 holes, 30 holes, etc. I lay these markers across the plastic canvas to help me count quickly and easily.

—Charlenn Harris, Kansas

I save all my yarn scraps 2 inches (and longer) in a bag. When we take a trip, I take the bag along and stitch coasters in the Texas Lone Star pattern, using every little scrap. I usually complete the background in off-white.

—Betty Werline, Texas

To keep different colors of yarn separate and tangle-free for a "take-along" project, roll the colors in balls and store them all in the same large zipper-seal bag. Punch a separate small hole in the bag for each color, and thread the yarn end through to the outside. I can then pull out and cut off the desired length of the desired color, and nothing gets tangled. The project can even be slipped in the bag when stitching time is over.
