Realities Of Literature:

Literature and Reality Howard Fast, 2011-12-27 DIV Howard Fast's controversial essay on the proper role of literature offering insight into his life and works div DIV In this 1950 essay Howard Fast argues that all writers have a duty to reflect the truth of the world in their works particularly regarding social justice Fast's treatise on literary criticism allows for a fuller understanding of his early novels in which his political beliefs remain inseparable from his writing div DIV div DIV Literature and Reality which Fast wrote around the time of the 1949 Peekskill riots offers a unique window into his worldview during the mid twentieth century div DIV div DIV This ebook features an illustrated biography of Howard Fast including rare photos from the author's estate div The Reality - Fiction Opposition in Children's Literature Adrian Zagler, 2011 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2010 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Literature grade 1 University of Graz language English abstract Since the 1970s scholarly interest in children's literature has grown and numerous studies looking into the complexity and thematic and structural depth of the texts have been published Simultaneously the notion of metareferentiality has sparked interest among scholars from various disciplines Metareferentiality though not unique to the twentieth and the twenty first centuries is said to be one of the key cultural phenomena of our time And yet these two fields of interest namely children's literature and metareferentiality have only very rarely been studied in the same context Metareferential elements in children's books are often seen as phenomena of dream worlds Thus they allow a traditional non critical reading in which the metareferential elements do not necessarily trigger medial awareness in the readers but can be explained logically and within the framework of the represented story worlds Consequently the epistemological status of reality would not be threatened by these texts However as this paper aims to prove such a reading for instance of the Alice stories Die Unendliche Geschichte and The Book of Lost Things although undeniably possible falls short of the true scope of the texts As will be shown all four books address the question of the status of fiction with reference to its opposition to reality albeit in different ways In their treatment of the subject they are clearly metafictional texts with epistemological and ontological concerns that require experienced readers to fully grasp their messages Nevertheless they are still publicly perceived as children's literature and are enjoyed by children and adults alike After some general remarks on the genre of children's literature and on metareferentiality this paper focuses on a particular form of metareference The Addresses and Journal of Proceedings of the National Educational Association, 1890 Current Literature, 1891 Building a National Literature Peter Uwe Hohendahl, 1989 Building a National Literature boldly takes issue with traditional literary criticism for its failure to explain how literature as a body is created and shaped by institutional forces Peter Uwe Hohendahl approaches literary history by focusing on the material and ideological structures that determine the canonical status of writers and works He examines important elements in the making of a national literature including the political and literary public sphere the theory and practice of literary criticism and the emergence of academic criticism as literary history Hohendahl considers such key aspects of the process in Germany as the rise of liberalism and nationalism the delineation of the borders of German literature the idea of its history the understanding of its cultural function and the notion of a canon of major and minor authors

Theories of Literary Realism Dario Villanueva,1997-04-24 Realism has not only shaped important schools and periods in literary history but has also been a fundamental constant of all literature its first theoretical formulation being the principle of mimesis in Aristotle's Poetics Realism can be considered by extension one of the main aspects of literary theory the aims of which must be to define its concepts clearly and to neutralize the imprecision polysemy and ambiguity that often characterized the application of realism This book explores the possibilities and limits of a concept of realism that seeks a point of equilibrium between the principle of the autonomy of the literary work vis a vis reality and the complex relations that the work clearly establishes with this reality It acknowledges that it is a personal response to the poststructuralist crisis in literary theory By concentrating on the study of the literary work of art as a verbal construction the great Continental and Anglo American tradition of formalism and New Criticism has ended up neglecting the second mimetic aspect of the literary problematic thus dissociating literature from life

The 1920 Edition of the Book of Mormon Richard L. Saunders,2022-01-25 Members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter day Saints tend to see the Book of Mormon through the lens of personal use as a single textual and scriptural monolith the Book of Mormon That is somewhat natural since we tend to have at hand and in use only the copy or version in our language needed to study it for inspiration In the process the point tends to get overlooked that while we may accept the text as inspired the physical embodiment of that text the Book of Mormon is a mortal reality The Book of Mormon while it has a spirit also has a mortal body or rather bodies existing in space and time As such it has a history and because it comes to us in the form of a book it also has a book history This study is divided into three parts The first part is a straightforward history of the edition's editing production and manufacturing processes It examines key points in the reprint history of the book following important factors in the subsequent impressions of the work across nearly thirty years of re impressions corrections transfers and one new format The narrative crowded into chapters one through four together leave Part II to catalogue the bibliographic minutia that is the beating heart of analytic book history and which provides entertainment for true blooded bibliophiles The details contained in the production and manufacturing contracts and coupled to the typographical evidence explained in Part III together resolve once and for all the question of what constitutes the 1920 edition and what does not

Truth, Fiction, and Literature Peter Lamarque,Stein Haugom Olsen,1994 This book examines the complex and varied ways in which fictions relate to the real world and offers a precise account of how imaginative works of literature can use fictional content to explore matters of universal human interest While rejecting the traditional view that literature is important for the truths that it imparts the authors also reject attempts to cut literature off altogether from real human concerns Their detailed account of fictionality mimesis and cognitive value founded on the methods of analytical philosophy restores to literature its distinctive status among cultural practices The authors also explore metaphysical and skeptical views prevalent in modern thought according to which the world itself is a kind of fiction and truth no more than a social construct They identify different conceptions of fiction in science logic epistemology and make believe and thereby challenge the idea that discourse per se is fictional and that different modes of discourse are at root indistinguishable They offer rigorous analyses of the roles of narrative imagination metaphor and making in human thought processes Both in their methods and in their conclusions Lamarque and Olsen aim to restore rigor and clarity to debates about the values of literature and to provide new philosophically sound foundations for a genuine change of direction in literary theorizing
