The Child's Conception of Language A. Sinclair, R. J. Jarvella, W. J. M. Levelt, 2013-03-12 It is obvious that the growing child manifests an increasing understanding of his language and facility to use it A major part of the child language literature is concerned with the child's developing linguistic and communicative competence Scattered evidence also shows however that children become progressively more aware of language as language It is interesting to consider in what ways the internal structure and mechanisms of language become more accessible Little is known about linguistic awareness of this kind the role it plays or how it develops When the new Projektgruppe für Psycholinguistik of the Max Planck Gesellschaft was founded the child's conception of language in analogy to Piaget's child's conception of the physical world became one of the research unit's topics of study As previous work on linguistic awareness was largely amorphous we first organized a kind of conference workshop with some of those who had worked in the area The aims of this meeting were to map out the field of study detail the phenomena of interest and define major theoretical issues The meeting took place just after the creation of the project group on May 3-7 1977 The participants were psychologists and linguists who had either published work on metalinguistic issues in child language or who could be expected to contribute substantially to the discussion This book is a direct outcome of that conference though it is not a complete reflection of the papers presented or of the discussion that took place
