

Lost Reality

*O soul of life, 't is thee we long to hear,
Thine eyes we seek for, and thy touch we dream;
Lost from our days, thou art a spirit near, -
Life needs thine eloquence, and ways supreme.
More real than we who but a semblance wear,
We see thee not, because thou wilt not seem!*

Poets of Reality Joseph Hillis Miller, 1992 The Poetry of William Carlos Williams of Rutherford Wendell Berry, 2011-02-10 A superb study that reminds us that Williams remains our contemporary not only for the lively cadences and fresh imagery that animate his poems but for the ethical imperative of his example The Sewanee Review Acclaimed essayist and poet Wendell Berry was born and has always lived in a provincial part of the country without an established literary culture In an effort to adapt his poetry to his place of Henry County Kentucky Berry discovered an enduringly useful example in the work of William Carlos Williams In Williams commitment to his place of Rutherford New Jersey Berry found an inspiration that inevitably influenced the direction of his own writing Both men would go on to establish themselves as respected American poets and here Berry sets forth his understanding of that evolution for Williams who in the course of his local membership and service became a poet indispensable to us all Generously quoting many of Williams best lines Berry produces a work of aesthetics more than evaluation of love more than critique Booklist

The Poem as Icon Margaret H. Freeman, 2020 The Poem as Icon resolves long standing questions of poetic function from a cognitive perspective Margaret Freeman shows how poetry as one expression of the aesthetic faculty enables us to iconically access and experience the being of reality

Americanizing Britain Genevieve Abravanel, 2012-04-06 How did Great Britain which entered the twentieth century as a dominant empire reinvent itself in reaction to its fears and fantasies about the United States Investigating the anxieties caused by the invasion of American culture from jazz to Ford motorcars to Hollywood films during the first half of the twentieth century Genevieve Abravanel theorizes the rise of the American Entertainment Empire as a new style of imperialism that threatened Britain's own In the early twentieth century the United States excited a range of utopian and dystopian energies in Britain Authors who might ordinarily seem to have little in common H G Wells Aldous Huxley and Virginia Woolf began to imagine Britain's future through America Abravanel explores how these novelists fashioned transatlantic fictions as a response to the encroaching presence of Uncle Sam She then turns her attention to the arrival of jazz after World War I showing how a range of writers from Elizabeth Bowen to W H Auden deployed the new music as a metaphor for the modernization of England The global phenomenon of Hollywood film proved even more menacing than the jazz craze prompting nostalgia for English folk culture and a lament for Britain's literary heritage Abravanel then refracts British debates about America through the writing of two key cultural critics F R Leavis and T S Eliot In so doing she demonstrates the interdependencies of some of the most cherished categories of literary study language nation and artistic value by situating the high low debates within a transatlantic framework

Yeats Bhabatosh Chatterjee, 1962 Studies in the Literary Imagination , 1981 Countries of the Mind Stanley Koehler, 1998 Responding to William Carlos Williams conviction that all poetry of worth contains a theme greater than any poem Countries of the Mind analyzes Williams own poetry in the light of his poem The Descent whose opening lines the descent beckons as the ascent beckoned are taken as the clearest statement of such a theme in Williams poetry In this reading the Descent represents the change in values that shifts the focus of our attention from the demands of the world to the concerns of the Self In following Williams growing awareness of this process from the early verse through the later work the argument discusses the descent to memory and to the unconscious as regions in what Williams calls in Paterson the countries of the mind In this context memory is the realm of poetry the unconscious region of that love without shadows in which the completion of the personality is to be accomplished BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America Inc All Rights Reserved Asian American Literature Lawrence J.
