Practical Guide To Complaints Handling In The Context Of Clinical Governance:

A Practical Guide to Complaints Handling Chris Gunn, 2001 In 1996 new statutory guidelines were published but there is no definitive guidance available about implementation Staff are expected to follow certain procedures In theory this is an area that could involve all staff anywhere in the NHS and complaints are on the increase In 1997 98 over 38 000 written complaints were received in England alone about general medical and dental services and family health services administration Complaints systems have been classified as one element of clinical governance and so are likely to have an even higher profile in future A Practical Guide to Complaints Handling is set out in two parts Primary Care and Secondary Care The material is user friendly and assessable equally to professional and lay people Practical examples are used to demonstrate the best way to deal with each scenario The underpinning legislation is provided in an appendix NHS Complaints Managers Clare Xanthos, 2004 This thesis is an interdisciplinary study of the conflicts and tensions in the role of NHS complaints managers The thesis sets out to explore the contradictions inherent in the role of complaints managers and the ways complaints managers deal with these contradictions The interdisciplinary theoretical underpinning of the research is informed by conceptualizations of the complaints manager in the specific socio legal sense of complaints handler third party dispute handler a broader public administration framework of administrator bureaucrat and finally a wide ranging sociological social psychological framework as social actor Thus the thesis draws on an eclectic range of literature from socio legal studies public administration sociology and social psychology It also draws on non theoretical social policy literature in relation to the policy context of the thesis In relation to methodology the research uses a qualitative approach It is based on in depth telephone interviews recorded with thirty NHS complaints managers which were transcribed verbatim and are the focus of systematic analysis The complaints managers interviews are supplemented with documentary analysis of job descriptions and person specifications of NHS complaints managers and email interviews with NHS complaints experts who are not complaint managers who have a specialist knowledge of the complaints manager role Three key areas emerged as the principal findings of the research The complaints manager s role encompasses inherent contradictions regardless of the personal style or individual approach of the complaints manager Complaints managers exhibited opposing stances that is very different responses reactions to the inherent contradictions in their role in relation to organization orientation versus complainant orientation There were different types of complaints managers Accordingly a typology of complaints managers was generated with specific reference to their responses and reactions to the inherent contradictions in their role in terms of complainant orientation versus organization orientation In conclusion the thesis argues that there are without doubt fundamental contradictions in the role of NHS complaints managers in terms of reconciling complainants rights with organizational requirements However ultimately individual complaints managers respond and react very differently to the inherent contradictions in their role

Conciliation in Healthcare Anne Ward Platt, Liam Donaldson, 2018-04-19

Conciliation is the term used in the National Health Service to describe a particular form of dispute resolution that is used in relation to the complaints process. Conciliation has uses beyond the resolution of complaints. It can be of value in any situation where the clinical relationship has broken down. Equally it may be used in an attempt to restore relationships as part of conflict management either within the NHS or in other organisations where conflict or disagreement exists. This concise practical guide clearly sets out the role of conciliation and dispels the many misconceptions surrounding procedures and expectations. Conciliation in Healthcare provides invaluable resources for all healthcare staff involved in complaints either from an operational strategic or academic perspective. This includes conciliators themselves and those involved in their training and staff with specific responsibilities for implementing complaints procedures both in the public and private sectors. It is also highly recommended for those who provide advocacy and support for complainants as well as those against whom complaints have been made.
