Practice Learning In The Caring Professions

Mark Doel, Steven Shardlow

Practice Learning In The Caring Professions:

Practice Learning in the Caring Professions Dave Evans, 2016-12-05 Dave Evans makes a convincing case that practice learning occupies a central role in the education and training of the caring professions. In doing so he affirms the activities of many service agency staff involved in practice teaching and assessment and offers them clear models and illustrative examples to aid their development. He also explores ways in which practice learning and assessment can be effectively developed in academic settings. Innovative Education and Training for Care Professionals Rachel Pierce, 2000 This positive book brings together current good practice in education and training for care professionals around a central theme of involving service users and improving the quality of their care. The contributors set out a strategy for the teaching of theory and practice to care professionals in the context of changing policy and practice in agencies and in higher education. Helpful guidance is offered to education and training providers in universities and agencies on the preparation of care professionals for the new millennium and beyond. Topics addressed within the book include international comparisons, research, teaching, the bridging of vocational professional and academic frameworks, user involvement, assessing professional competence, teaching anti-discriminatory practice. While drawing primarily from social work, this book takes an interprofessional approach and will be essential reading for all health and care education providers. Rachel Pierce and Jenny Weinstein have brought together academics, researchers and practitioners to reflect with them both positively and critically on a broad range of contemporary educational developments, thus providing a sound analysis to shape future arrangements for quality professional education and training. Training Course, Residential Child Care Worker Mark P. Hale, 1966

Educating Professionals Mark Doel, Steven Shardlow, 2009 Educating Professionals offers a comprehensively written account of the recent organizational and conceptual changes in UK practice education. Using case examples, the authors focus on student learning in practice settings: how this is organized, what methods are used, and how their abilities are assessed. Covering nine professions in the field, the authors explore the overlap in these roles, their discrete areas of expertise, and introduce the general concepts that translate between professions. Integrated Interdisciplinary Learning Between the Health and Social Care Professions Rosemary Tope, 1996 Traditionally, the various professions concerned with health and social care have undertaken their training and subsequent studies without interprofessional collaboration. Increasingly, these professions are considering an interdisciplinary approach as the most effective way to deliver quality client care. However, how do they proceed with implementing such radical changes? This book, based on empirical research, provides answers to many of the questions. The opinions of 1683 teachers and students from thirteen professions are presented overall and also in individual professional profiles. The curriculum for each of the participating professions has been analysed, and core subjects suitable for interdisciplinary learning identified, together with how and when integration should take place. This book should be valuable reading for all those involved or interested in the training of doctors, nurses, dentists, dental surgery assistants,
