Shipka, 2011-04-30 To many academics composition still represents typewritten texts on 8 5 x 11 pages that follow rote argumentative guidelines In Toward a Composition Made Whole Jody Shipka views composition as an act of communication that can be expressed through any number of media and as a path to meaning making Her study offers an in depth examination of multimodality via the processes values structures and semiotic practices people employ every day to compose and communicate their thoughts Shipka counters current associations that equate multimodality only with computer digitized or screen mediated texts which are often self limiting She stretches the boundaries of composition to include a hybridization of aural visual and written forms Shipka analyzes the work of current scholars in multimodality and combines this with recent writing theory to create her own teaching framework Among her methods Shipka employs process oriented reflection and a statement of goals and choices to prepare students to compose using various media in ways that spur their rhetorical and material awareness They are encouraged to produce unusual text forms while also learning to understand the composition process as a whole Shipka presents several case studies of students working in multimodal composition and explains the strategies tools and spaces they employ She then offers methods to critically assess multimodal writing projects Toward a Composition Made Whole challenges theorists and compositionists to further investigate communication practices and broaden the scope of writing to include all composing methods While Shipka views writing as crucial to discourse she challenges us to always consider the various purposes that writing serves
