Practice Of Policy Evaluation:

Policy Evaluation Ray C. Rist,1995 For governments to be successful in achieving their objectives they need to select the correct policy instruments This volume addresses the role of policy instruments in achieving policy objectives Policy Evaluation provides a systematic assessment of the impact that public policy evaluations have on the governance of democratic societies This book emphasises the impacts of policy evaluations on the formulation implementation and accountability functions of governments At all three phases of the policy cycle there is a need for coherent and systematic evaluation This book demonstrates how such evaluations can be conducted and the opportunities for their subsequent utilization Handbook of Public Policy Evaluation Frédéric Varone,Steve Jacob,Pirmin Bundi,2023-10-06 This comprehensive Handbook examines public policy evaluation in democracies Focusing on the political dimension of the evaluation process it argues that policy evaluation can be an emancipatory tool reducing social inequalities and exclusion and offers novel suggestions on how evaluations can be used to improve democratic policymaking Tradeable Permits Policy Evaluation, Design and Reform OECD,2004-05-11 This publication offers valuable lessons for applying tradeable permits and provides links between policy evaluation and policy making general Handbook of Social Policy Evaluation Bent Greve,2017-03-31 This Handbook uses methodologies and cases to discover how and when to evaluate social policy and looks at the possible impacts of evaluation on social policy decisions The contributors present a detailed analysis on how to conduct social policy evaluation how to be aware of pitfalls and dilemmas and how to use evidence effectively Handbook of Education Policy Research Lora Cohen-Vogel,Peter Youngs,Janelle Scott,2025-07-17 The second edition of the Handbook of Education Policy Research the largest volume published in AERA s history addresses a variety of policy and contextual issues in early childhood K 12 and postsecondary education that have received extensive empirical attention during the past 15 years With the pandemic and social turmoil as a backdrop the editors build on the breadth and depth of the first edition while expanding the scope of the project to include subjects methods theories and analyses that have contributed powerfully to the study of education policy and politics in the 2010s and 2020s The field has become more comprehensive and inclusive and the authors represent a diversity of racial ethnic and gender identities and intellectual and disciplinary orientations Most chapters come from multiple authors reflecting the multi sourced development of research in education policy since the first volume was published This compilation consists of 70 chapters and nine commentaries that map past present and future directions of the field and richly attend to critical issues of interest to students researchers policy makers and practitioners Strategies for Urban Network Learning Leon van den Dool,2020-05-06 This book presents international experiences in urban network learning It is vital for cities to learn as it is necessary to constantly adapt and improve public performance and address complex challenges in a constantly changing environment It is therefore highly relevant to gain more insight into how cities can learn Cities address problems and challenges in networks of co operation between existing and new actors such as state actors market players and civil society This book presents various learning environments and methods for urban network learning and aims to learn from experiences across the globe How does learning take place in these urban networks What factors and situations help or hinder these learning practices Can we move from intuition to a strategy to improve urban network learning

Renewable Energy Policy in Remote Rural Areas of Western China: Implementation and Socio-economic Benefits Chian-Woei Shyu, 2010-07-20 Electricity is essential for rural development In 2005 1.6 billion people around a quarter of the world's population living mostly in rural areas of developing countries had no access to electricity In general remote rural areas in developing countries have little prospect of having access to grid based electricity which usually only extends to densely populated urban areas where a large customer base justifies heavy expenditure for electricity infrastructure One option for electrification in remote rural areas is to decentralize electricity systems based on renewable energy sources However such an option is not universally agreed upon This dissertation examines a renewable energy based rural electrification program the Township Electrification Program launched by the Chinese government in 2002 The Program was implemented in 1013 non electrified townships in remote rural areas of 11 western provinces providing electricity for 300 000 households and 1.3 million people And at the time of research the Program was known as the world's largest renewable energy based rural electrification program in terms of investment volume ever carried out by a country Two townships Saierlong Township in Qinghai Province and Namcuo Township in Tibet Autonomous Region were selected as cases for an in depth examination of rural electrification practices in remote rural areas of western China Both qualitative interviews observations mapping and transition walk and quantitative household survey methods were applied in the field to collect data The main findings of the study are summarized as follows First political leaders concern over the unequal economic development of eastern and western China as well as rural and urban areas was the main factor triggering inclusion of the policy issue electricity access in remote rural areas of western China in the government's policy agenda Second like other energy policies the formulation and adoption of the Township Electrification Program followed a centralized and closed top down approach within China's communist political framework conditions which ultimately resulted in pursuing political leaders conceptions instead of the energy needs of local people Third the implementation of the Program possessed a technical orientation e.g. construction of stations installation of systems and underestimated the financial implications e.g. electricity tariff households ability to pay electricity fee financial management as well as human resources available e.g. training for operators household participation and institutional capacity building e.g. good governance regulatory framework at the local level Fourth there was a change of households energy use pattern from traditional energy sources such as candles and dry cell batteries to electricity from solar PV power stations in the two investigated townships But traditional energy sources were not totally substituted by electricity This is due to the fact that the current electricity supply was not sufficient for households needs and electricity was not provided daily on a regular basis Households still had to rely on traditional energy sources Fifth the impacts of the Program on the improvement of socio economic benefits for households the improvement of township development and the reduction of negative environmental impacts were limited Lastly based on these findings this study suggests policy recommendations for the Chinese government as well as policy implications for developing countries Creative Systems in Structural and Construction Engineering Amarjit Singh,2017-11-22 An examination of creative systems in structural and construction engineering taken from conference proceedings Topics covered range from construction methods safety and quality to seismic response of structural elements and soils and pavement analysis NIH Guide for Grants and Contracts National Institutes of Health (U.S.),1993

K. Trochim,Melvin M. Mark,Leslie J. Cooksy,2009-10-19 This issue of New Directions for Evaluation addresses the topic of evaluation policy especially how it is informed by and affects evaluation practice An evaluation policy is any rule or principle that a group or organization uses to guide its decisions and actions when doing evaluation Every group and organization that engages in evaluation including government agencies private businesses and nonprofit organizations has evaluation policies Sometimes they are formal explicit and written at other times they are more implicit and ad hoc principles or norms that have simply evolved over time Evaluation policy is a critically important issue for the field and profession of evaluation Evaluation policies profoundly affect the day to day work of all evaluators Many recent and current controversies or conflicts in the field of evaluation can be viewed at least in part as struggles around evaluation policy The chapters in this issue consider evaluation policy in its many and varied settings and contexts including extensive treatment of large scale national evaluation policy both in the United States and in Europe The issue brings together revised and extended versions of all of the key addresses in the presidential strand of the 2008 American Evaluation Association conference including the presidential address plenary speeches and expert lectures This is the 123rd volume of the Jossey Bass quarterly thematic journal New Directions for Evaluation an official publication of the American Evaluation Association The journal publishes empirical methodological and theoretical works on all aspects of evaluation Each issue is devoted to a single topic with contributions solicited organized reviewed and edited by a guest editor or editors Issues may take any of several forms such as a series of related chapters a debate or a long article followed by brief critical commentaries

Assessment Practice in Student Affairs John H. Schuh, M. Lee Upcraft, 2001 When Assessment in Student Affairs was first published in 1996 readers found a practical context for viewing the power of assessment across the domain of student services Since then John H Schuh and M Lee Upcraft have received numerous requests for more specific guidance to assessing and communicating the value of student affairs This manual continues the work begun in their earlier book and provides a full range of tools for conducting effective assessments The authors begin with an overview of the assessment process and then detail a range of methodologies approaches and issues explaining how to use them and when to recruit expertise from other campus sources Drawing from the latest practice and a wealth of case studies they discuss Qualitative assessment including how to conduct focus groups Quantitative assessment including how to select and design instruments Data collection and analysis including mailed questionnaires telephone surveys and Web based surveys Assessing diverse needs satisfaction outcomes environments cost effectiveness and accreditation Specialized assessment studies including how to review dropouts graduates academic success and group educational programs Select programs in student services including first year programs recreation programs financial aid admissions residence halls college unions health services career services counseling services judicial affairs and Greek life Organizational and ethical approaches to assessment
