Sauerstoff Anthony A. Delyannis, Eurydike A. Delyannis, 2013-11-11 Processes for recovering fresh water from the oceans of which men have dreamed since antiquity have changed markedly in the last 20 years In fact it has become possible so to increase the productivity of the technical steps involved that the cost of production of such water is almost three orders of magnitude smaller than for other large volume industrial products However the monographs and comprehensive reviews which have appeared to date in this field have been prepared by specialists for specialists In accordance with the tradition and objectives of the Gmelin Handbook this bibliography has been prepared to provide access to all of the ways in which fresh water can be and has been obtained on an industrial scale from the ocean Production of fresh water from sea and brackish waters amounts to almost two million cubic meters per day and this is increasing by about 25% per year This means that it will increase nearly tenfold in 10 years Research and Development Progress Report United States. Turner,1991 The aim of the Technical Advisory Committee in planning the content of this meeting was to illustrate the range of separation processes in which the use of membranes was practical and effective at an industrial scale As Professor Strathmann reveals the market for process equipment built around membranes is now worth about 5x10<sup>9</sup> annually and it seemed important to review this technology and to point the direction of future technical advances All but the most critical reader should find some items of interest The Committee would admit to not fulfilling all of their aims although those delegates who attended the meeting in Edinburgh judged it a success In the event it provided representative examples of processes from the food and beverage industry from water treatment and from the chemical industry of which the removal of alcohol from fermented beverages shipboard desalination and solvent recovery are three The major uses of charged membranes and sterile processes are not covered nor is the largest market 1.2x10<sup>10</sup> annually for artificial kidney dialysis However it is interesting to see artificial kidney now finding an alternative use as a reactor for the production of monoclonal antibodies We are also reminded by Professor Michel of the importance and efficiency of natural membranes in the kidney under conditions where fouling is crucial to their performance and enhances their selectivity
