Congress and the Politics of Problem Solving E. Scott Adler, John D. Wilkerson, 2013-01-14 How do issues end up on the agenda Why do lawmakers routinely invest in program oversight and broad policy development What considerations drive legislative policy change For many Congress is an institution consumed by partisan bickering and gridlock Yet the institution's long history of addressing significant societal problems even in recent years seems to contradict this view Congress and the Politics of Problem Solving argues that the willingness of many voters to hold elected officials accountable for societal conditions is central to appreciating why Congress responds to problems despite the many reasons mustered for why it cannot The authors show that across decades of policy making problem solving motivations explain why bipartisanship is a common pattern of congressional behavior and offer the best explanation for legislative issue attention and policy change

Reviewing Delegation James H. Cox, 2004-04-30 Members of Congress often delegate power to bureaucratic experts but they fear losing permanent control of the policy One way Congress has dealt with this problem is to require reauthorization of the program or policy Cox argues that Congress uses this power selectively and is more likely to require reauthorization when policy is complex or they do not trust the executive branch By contrast reauthorization is less likely to be required when there are large disagreements about policy within Congress In the process Cox shows that committees are important independent actors in the legislative process and that committees with homogenous policy preferences may have an advantage in getting their bills through Congress
