Relative Inefficiency Of Quotas:

The Relative Inefficiency of Quotas James E. Anderson, 1988-01 James Anderson has been a singular force in the research on tariffs versus quotas. In this book he demonstrates that in most reasonable circumstances quotas are an inferior trade policy relative to import tariffs. He presents substantive new work on tariffs and quotas in imperfect competition and provides a better understanding of quotas and protection policies generally. In the current debate about protectionism, free trade and fair trade, Anderson's conclusions fly in the face of congressional approval of import quotas as a strategy to improve American life. While he does not advocate protectionism, he shows that import quotas and tariffs are far from equivalent, illustrating the efficiency of tariffs with case studies of specific commodities and products such as cheese and other milk products and textiles. Anderson makes an original contribution to the treatments of tariffs and quotas by creating a general presumption in favor of tariffs when protection is unavoidable and provides a useful integrated perspective on the large tariffs versus quotas literature. James E. Anderson is Professor of Economics at Boston College. The Economic Effects of Significant U.S. Import Restraints, 1991 Tariff Rate Quotas and Their Administration Christina Mönnich, 2004 Tariff Rate Quotas are an important though controversial instrument of international agricultural trade policy. They are meant to provide market access but can be designed to be as restrictive as import quotas. In the political and academic discussion, quota administration is blamed to cause extra inefficiencies. However, little research exists on how different methods of quota administration compare to each other. This question is approached by an econometric model for censored panel data which was applied to the EU's tariff rate quotas. Furthermore, this work analyses how tariff rate quotas are governed by WTO rules, how they are applied in practice by the EU and US, and how they could be reformed in the ongoing agricultural trade negotiations. State Trading in the Twenty-First Century Thomas Cottier, Petros C.
