Castellarin,Giovanni Battista Tornielli,2019-12-06 Fruits play a substantial role in the human diet as a source of vitamins minerals dietary fiber and a wide range of molecules relevant to health promotion and disease prevention The characterization of genes involved in the accumulation of these molecules during fruit development and ripening and in the overall plant s response to the environment constitutes a fundamental step for improving yield and quality related traits and for predicting this crop s behavior in the field This is certainly the case for grapevine Vitis vinifera L one of the most largely cultivated fruit crops in the world The cultivation of this species is facing challenging scenarios driven by climate change including increases in atmospheric carbon dioxide CO₂ solar radiation and earth surface temperature and decreases of water and nutrient availability All these events will potentially affect the grapevine phenology physiology and metabolism in many growing regions and ultimately affect the quality of their fruits and of the most important derived product the wine The sequencing of the grapevine genome has given rise to a new era characterized by the generation of large scale data that requires complex computational analyses Numerous transcriptomic and metabolomic studies have been performed in the past fifteen years providing insights into the gene circuits that control the accumulation of all sorts of metabolites in grapevines From now on the integration of two or more omics will allow depicting gene transcript metabolite networks from a more holistic i e systems perspective This eBook attempts to support this new direction by gathering innovative studies that assess the impact of genotypes the environment and agronomical practices on fruits at the ome scale The works hereby collected are part of a Research Topic covering the use of omics driven strategies to understand how environmental factors and agronomical practices including microclimate modification e g sunlight incidence or temperature water availability and irrigation and postharvest management affect fruit development and composition These studies report well settled transcriptomic and metabolomic methods in addition to newly developed techniques addressing proteome profiles genome
